THE FIRST Farmers Home administration senior citizen home in New Madrid was built for Mrs. Ella Henry and her daughter, Mrs. Mildred Dillard, Lilbourn, who occupied it in September of 1964. The two-bedroom house cost them $5,100. Mrs. Henry and her daughter stand on the front porch.

Parma Couple to Have First New Home

By LEO SCHADE

PARMA--Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Parker, 16-year residents of Parma and farmers for 50 years, will have the first new home of a lifetime.

The home will be the 100th such structure built in New Madrid county, under the senior citizens program since September, 1964, by the Farmers Home Administration.

Parker is 74 and his wife 63. They have reared 11 children, seven sons and four daughters.

"We felt that our children should have a good education, and all who sought a college education, received one," the father said.

Four are school teachers, one an engineer, and another has a doctor's degree in physics, teaching at Bowling Green, Ky., college. The youngest son is a junior in college. The couple has 61 grandchildren.

They farmed in Alabama and Arkansas before moving to Missouri. Parker retired nine years ago.

The new Parker home will have brick trimming in the front, which causes an increase in the loan price for the two-bedroom home from a $5,800 loan to $6,100.

The total price includes all closing costs, lot, material and labor. The debt will be paid off over 33 years at around $30 per month.

Homes can be constructed for senior citizens for one, two or three bedrooms, varying in cost from $5,100 to $5,800.

Homes previously built under the program in the county have cost $530,000 in material and labor, $50,000 for lots, and $10,000 for closing loans, which includes title opinions, abstracting and recording.

On the date of the 100th loan made to the Parkers, a letter was received by R. T. "Dick" Bartlett, in charge of the FHA office in the county from Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Wakefield, Parma:

"We have now lived in our new home for one year. This is the first new home we have had in 45 years of marriage. We reared eight children, and there never was enough money for us to buy a home. We cordially invite anyone to visit our new home, and we are doing our best to make it as attractive as possible."

CATV For City Debated

Conflicting claims were made and debated at a public hearing held last night by the city council on cable television.

Five men, representing as many as five CATV companies, the names of some of which were not disclosed, began the meeting with ten minute speeches.

Weber Gilmore, Sikeston attorney, told the council that his corporation, consisting of two Sikeston men and one man from out of the city, would take either a lease or a franchise in serving the city with cable television.

He said he thought that his corporation could better serve the community with a lease with the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, which could make use microwave facilities and existing lines.

He said that his company would not be in the repair service or antenna business.

Gilmore said that he thought if Sikeston desired CATV, the people were entitled to it.

He said that his corporation could bring in 12 channels.

Walter Haymert, Chicago, Ill., told the council that his company has an arrangement with Malden, is operating in Warrensburg and has a pole agreement with Southwestern Bell.

He said his company would bring in 12 channels.

Robert Jernigan, Hattisburg, Miss., said that he represented Earl Jarvis and Charles Conn.

He said they have systems in operation at Caruthersville and Paragould, Ark., in this region.

He told the council that CATV was not pay television and that his company would not service or sell television sets in order not to interfere with local businesses.

"It is a service needed by the people," Jernigan said.

His company would offer 10 channels.

Tom Allen said that he came for information for WKER of New York City. The council said that all would be notified within 30 days of the council's decision.

Jack Neins of KFVS Television in Cape Girardeau told of hazards of CATV.

He said with the present three television channels available here advertising has a value and that CATV would result in a fragmentation of viewers and lowering of advertising values.

Neins said that people of this region would be exposed to advertising from St. Louis and Memphis and that would tend to draw business away from local businesses.

He asked that the council examine all facts before deciding to bring CATV into the city.

Highway Beautification Problems Face House

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Highway beautification problems faced the Missouri House today.

A mangled billboard control bill was approved by a committee last week. It includes a provision for billboard spot zoning in rural areas.

Sponsors of the original version said that would nullify Missouri's chances to get $10 million in federal highway aid.

Monday the House advanced a $4.4 million catchall appropriation bill, the last money bill of the session.

A House-Senate conference committee already is at work on the other major bills in the $1 million-plus budget.

Sent to the Senate was a measure to provide state aid for part time students in public schools. Only full time students are counted now for state aid purposes.

Meanwhile Sen. William B. Waters, D-Liberty, Senate majority leader, held out hope the special session could finish its work by next Wednesday, May 4, if no major problems develop.

It has been generally assumed the 60-day special session would have to adjourn automatically at midnight, May 5.

But Waters told the Senate the actual deadline is Friday, May 6, which would be 60 days after the first day of the session. Gov. Warren E. Hearnes and House Speaker Thomas D. Graham, D-Cole County, agreed with this interpretation.

The governor said he has asked the attorney general to recheck the question just to make sure.

A Methodist Hospital spokesman said DeRudder's death was "sudden" an "unexplained."

Two Injured in Traffic Accidents

Two persons were injured in traffic accidents Monday.

Luther Sims, 40, Portageville, driving a 1964 Chevrolet, received a back injury one and one-half miles north of Portageville, on highway 61, last night at 10:30 p.m.

He lost control of his car, left the road, crossed it and turned over. He was treated by a Portageville physician.

Monday at 7 a.m., one mile south of Old Appleton, on highway 61, a 1965 White tractor-trailer driver, Zelma Ring, 48, West Memphis, received a leg injury in avoiding a collision.

In order to avoid crashing into another approaching car, the driver of the tractor-trailer left the road. Ludwig was given a summons for driving on the wrong side of the roadway, the state patrol reported.

Auto Industry Asks Federal Safety Guides

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reversing its previous position, the automobile industry called today for "effective and forceful governmental machinery for setting vehicle safety standards without delay."

John S. Bugas, vice president of Ford Motor Co., told a House committee in behalf of the auto manufacturers:

"We favor a strong role for the federal government in setting vehicle safety performance standards."

The industry contended in earlier congressional testimony that it should be allowed to set car safety standards.

Two witnesses, Policeman Bill Partin and Louis Jimmerson, Jr., were called to the stand to testify for the state represented by Scott County Prosecuting Attorney Fielding Potashnick.

After hearing the testimony of the two witnesses, Pogue then took the stand and was questioned by his attorney, who claimed that Pogue did not know that a felony had been committed.

Pogue was admitted at the Missouri Delta Community hospital for treatment. He is still there.

Thunderstorms Drench Flood Region of Texas

MARSHALL, Tex. AP -- Violent thunderstorms swept across drenched northeast Texas Monday, threatening to make flooding conditions more serious and adding to damages that already reach into the millions.

Tornadoes struck in south Texas and winds up to 75 miles per hour lashed the Corpus Christi area. At least five damaging twisters were reported in Texas Monday.

A packing plant was damaged and trees uprooted at Marshall and a second tornado in the Marshall area knocked down power lines and swept away the roof of a press box at a baseball park.

Another twister dipped to the ground north of Lake Qutman in the Mineola area. It caused heavy damage on the Keysey Ross farm.

Earlier, tornadoes struck the town of Kenedy and Runge in south Texas, leaving about 250 persons homeless and causing extensive damage to business buildings.

Red Cross officials said floodwaters had entered 50 homes in Longview and that about 50 families would probably be evacuated from the Roosevelt area of Dallas.

We don't say they are outright lies either.

PROTECTION OF PRIVACY

Congress is looking for new ways to protect the privacy of the American citizen without creating more problems than it solves. The right to privacy is now -- thanks to two Supreme Court decisions of the past year -- backed by constitutional guarantees. Nevertheless actual encroachment on the privacy of the individual appears to be less escapable than ever.

The trouble is that, in the modern world, a large measure of privacy is necessarily sacrificed and the loss can be mitigated only slightly by new laws. Our society requires extensive record-keeping on every individual. This is a cradle-to-grave process that begins with footprinting the newborn infant and ends only with the cause-of-death notation on the death certificate.

Over a life span, the dossier piles up: data on parents, medical records, school reports, intelligence and psychological test scores, job histories, credit facts, and so on. Some of this information the individual gives up himself, often through filling out the innumerable questionnaires that come his way. The remainder is obtained without his knowledge from sources not known to him.

The result is that more personal data on the average mid-20th century American be picked up by a routine check in a few days than scholars have been able to uncover about William Shakespeare -- a well-known actor in his day -- after four centuries of digging. And most Americans are so inured to living in the fishbowl age, they willingly disclose information about themselves which their forebears would have considered nobody's business but their own.

But there are limits, even for the privacy-stripped American of today. A few weeks ago, for instance, the State Department put a stop to the practice of asking U.S. embassies to keep watch on American travelers "considered controversial." In a highly publicized case of a different sort, the president of General Motors Corp. apologized on March 22 before a Senate subcommittee for hiring a detective agency to pry into the private life of a subcommittee witness. Ralph Nadar had written a book and had given testimony critical of the industry for neglect of safety in automobile design.

No less than a half-dozen congressional subcommittees have investigated some phase of the privacy invasion question over the past year or so. Some of their revelations led to corrective action. The Post Office Department closed down the peepholes through which its agents spied on employees in locker rooms and toilets. Of more general application, the Department curtailed a long-standing practice of placing mail covers -- that is, recording information on the envelopes of letters delivered to particular addressees -- for use by an investigative agency.

Another area where limits on privacy invasion are being sought involves the use of hidden eavesdropping devices. Practically everyone is agreed that private snooping through wiretapping or the secret placement of miniature microphones and transmitters should have no place in American life. The big argument is under what conditions the police should be allowed to use them in the war on crime.

Telephone tapping was presumably outlawed by Congress in 1934, yet the practice still goes on. Evidence gained from wiretapping is permitted in some state (though no federal) courts. The Justice Department has long sought legislation to permit law enforcers to tap phones in crime investigations. However, Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach told a Senate Subcommittee on March 22 it would be better for Congress to ban all wiretapping outright than to leave the situation in its present ambiguous state.

The new miniature eavesdropping devices present an even more difficult control problem. The Federal Communications Commission adopted a rule, effective on April 8, forbidding private citizens to use radio devices to eavesdrop, but left it up to the states to decide whether their police should use them. In New York State, a court held on March 1 that court orders permitting police eavesdropping by such a device were invalid because contrary to the Fourth Amendment to the Constitution governing search and seizure.

Every newspaper publisher knows that he gives away thousands of dollars worth of advertising annually to causes which seem to serve the whole community.

Contributions of space go to every thing from Brownie cookie sales to farm development programs. Much of the publicity borders on closely to what should be paid advertising. Some of the borderline publicity is received without thanks.

A recent instance involving a giant lumber corporation and a small country newspaper is a good example.

For years the newspaper had been conducting a running campaign to prevent the malicious setting of forest fires. The campaign primarily served the lumber company which owned virtually all of the timber in the vicinity. However, the lumber company refused to do occasional institutional advertising in the newspaper.

The newspaper finally concluded that it was contributing beyond its obligations to the public welfare and discontinued its efforts to protect the forest lands of one company.

After several months an old pattern of forest burning was resumed. Because of spite, ignorance, or pure malicious amusement, the peoples of the community began to start fires which cost the lumber company hundreds of thousands of dollars within a few weeks.

The lumber company found it necessary to start advertising on a much larger scale than ever proposed by the newspaper. And it was necessarily local newspaper advertising since the small newspaper was the only publication read and respected by the rural community.

The advertising worked. It isn't a pretty story; but it is true.

RIGHT TO WORK GETS STRONG SUPPORT FROM COLLEGE STUDENTS

An in-depth exploration of thinking and attitudes of American college students shows that an overwhelming percentage (72 1/2%) favor enactment and enforcement of state Right to Work laws. The following "bellwether" colleges, which together provide a cross-section of America's 2,000,000 college students, lent their student-bodies to the study:

Sarah Lawrence College, Brooksville, N. Y.; Williams College, Williamstown, Mass.; Yale University, New Haven, Conn; Marquette University, Milwaukee, Wisc.; Boston University; Indiana University, Bloomington, Ind.; University of South Carolina, Columbia, S.C.; Reed College, Portland, Ore.; Davidson College, Davidson, N.C.; Brandeis University, Waltham, Mass.; Stanford University, Palo Alto, Calif. Two are tax-supported, the others are private.

The project was conducted, with highly scientific methods, by Educational Reviewer, Inc. In reporting the results, the project director said:

"One of the few areas of general agreement in the poll has to do with right-to-work laws. Every school in the poll except Sarah Lawrence has a substantial majority either definitely in favor or somewhat in favor of such a law, and at no school does a plurality disapprove of the measure. In all, five-eighths of the students polled showed partiality toward right-to-work, with little more than a sixth showing opposition."

KNOW WHAT YOU'RE TALKING ABOUT -- READ ...

"The Deepest Days" by Robert Stenuit. The science of oceanography is advancing on a slowly awakening public like a cheetah on a fat impala. Today man scans the heavens because they are unreachable except in his imagination. Yet 20 minutes at 30 feet with an aqualung in any coastal cove and man forgets the stars in favor of the starfish. Robert Stenuit has helped to open a new world for man, "Innerspace," as romantic and mysterious as outer space. Today Stenuit is a record-holder, tomorrow he will be just another oceanographic explorer, and next Monday, a fondly-remembered pioneer. Such is the wave and it is largely due to men like Ed Link, the driving spirit of enthusiastic inventiveness behind this path-finding venture, to whom Stenuit devotes a glowing biographical chapter. The author then introduces himself as an underwater archaeologist learning survival in the sea. Link and Stenuit move quickly from spelunking through treasure diving to salvage operations and Mediterranean submarine archaeology. Stenuit's coolness and Link's drive make a rare combination and climaxes in a two-day stay with John Lindberg in a new house 400 feet underwater. Adventure, difficulties, failures and successes all add up to challenge. Oceanography has taken a step in the right direction. Stimulating, provocative reading for anybody.

Inattention Is A Major Cause Of Traffic Accidents

The Missouri Highway Patrol reports that inattention while driving is a major contributing cause of traffic accidents.

Last year, in accidents investigated by the Patrol, 3,581 mishaps were directly attributed to inattention.

Captain John A. Berglund, of the Patrol's Division of Safety, commented, "Motorists are subjected to many distractions when operating their vehicles. They are responsible for not permitting these to lead to inattention and neglect of the primary job of driving safely.

"It isn't necessary for a driver to keep his eyes glued to the road, excluding all else from sight and hearing. It is possible, however, to avoid certain acts that may lead to trouble."

Captain Berglund urged motorists to avoid the following acts when behind the wheel: (1) Daydreaming; (2) Looking at passengers while driving; (3) Looking out the rear view mirror for a long period of time; (4) Searching for something on the floor while in motion; (5) Checking maps for the next stop.

"Taking your mind off driving for any reason and for only a short period of time can lead to a traffic accident," declared the Captain. "A vehicle traveling only 30 miles per hour travels over 130 feet in three seconds. If a driver takes his eyes or mind off the road for only that short period of time, quite a bit can happen. At faster speeds, it is even more dangerous.

"Motorists must realize that driving is a full-time job," Captain Berglund concluded. "They must give their full attention to what is going on in traffic and do their best to avoid any act that may lead to inattention."

WHAT SEA POWER INVOLVES

It has long been said that "sea power means world power."

Historical precedent -- and certain current events as well-prove this. But there is certainly a need for better understanding of just what sea power involves.

The Portland, Oregon Journal recently touched on two aspects of maritime affairs which, it believes, are insufficiently realized: "One is that the nation which is the principal threat to peace, the Soviet Union, is making strenuous and remarkable successful efforts to become a world sea-power for the first time. The other is that with all the advances in air transportation and our investment in space research, our Navy and merchant Marine still are vital to America's safety and prosperity, and will remain so."

The merchant marine, in other words, is as much a part of sea power as the Navy itself. The Soviets recognize this -- in fact, they aren't only trying to become a world sea power, but hope to be THE world sea power in the foreseeable future. They are in the midst of a merchant marine building program of enormous scope. Their new ships are excellent in every respect. Even though much of the Soviet economy is lagging, there is no slowing down in this -- the order is full speed ahead.

Ships -- merchant ships, flying their countries' flags -- are prime cold war weapons. They are instruments with which world economic strength, influence, and prestige are built. U.S. merchant marine policy must always reflect that truth. And American shippers can be of the greatest help in this contest for control of the seas by specifying that their cargoes move on U.S. - flag vessels whenever possible.

H. L. Hunt Says

INFLATION AND GOVERNMENT

Suddenly everyone is talking about rising prices and wages. From a mere bugaboo of a so-called "radical right," they have abruptly emerged as a clear and present danger.

No one likes a general rise in prices and wages, moving upward more rapidly than real productivity. Everyone wants to prevent it in advance if possible and stop it when it is obviously underway.

There is little the individual, alone, can do about it. He has to use the money government provides. He has to pay the prices asked for goods, if he buys them at all, and there are some he must buy, food being the most obvious example.

There is a great deal that government could do to halt inflation, if the true cause of inflation were better understood and government officials were really more interested in the people's welfare than their own. Government could stop pumping more money and credit into the economy through the Federal Reserve system; since government by itself can produce no wealth at all, the effect of such money and credit is wholly inflationary. Government could also reduce its borrowing, which would mean reducing its spending.

But we rarely hear proposals for measures like these to halt inflation, and they never come from government. Instead, the newspapers are filled with talk of higher taxes and more controls, which would give government more money to take and more to spend. It is foolish to call such measures "anti-inflationary." More spending and buying by government has just the same inflationary effects as more spending and buying by private individuals.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- The automobile industry is confident it will do better in blocking government controls on accident safety before the House Commerce Committee than it did before the Senate. Before Sen. Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., and his Commerce Committee, it took a bad shellacking.

Reason for the optimism is more pro-industry congressmen on the House committee, especially Watler Rogers, Tex., Horace Kornegay, N.C., Democrats, with Glenn Cunningham, Neb., Arthur Younger, Calif., and Albert Watson, S.C., Republicans.

The motor moguls also consider Chairman Harley Staggers, D-W. Va., a bit flibberty-jibberty and figure they can bend him their way.

What the industry will plug for is at least to retain the Johnson administration bill, written under the supervision of Secretary of Commerce John T. Connor, formerly a General Motors director.

The Connor bill contains the amazing provision that the investigator's report of an accident cannot be used before the courts in a criminal or civil suit. Furthermore the investigator himself cannot be subpoenaed to appear in court.

Thus the information the public pays for cannot be used by the public.

The bill provides for federal investigative teams all over the United States to probe accidents on the spot, all paid for by the taxpayers. However, the information is not to be used in court, obviously because it might show the auto manufacturers to be at fault.

Thus if an accident occurred because of a stuck accelerator, the federal accident report could not be used in court. Today, some drivers are in jail serving manslaughter convictions because of car defects and because the reports of defects could not be used in court. This will not be remedied by the new safety bill proposed by the Johnson administration.

SUPPRESSING REPORTS

Furthermore, the Division of Accident Protection in the Health, Education, and Welfare Department has long followed a deliberate policy of suppressing accident reports paid for by the taxpayer.

When this charge was made in the Senate hearings by Ralph Nader, the young attorney who sparked the entire probe of auto safety, Phil Lee, newly appointed assistnat Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, was frank enough to tell Nader publicly that he was quite right.

In fact, Leon Goldstein, chief of Grants Research in the Division of Accident Prevention, has even refused to let his superior, Assistant Secretary Lee, see some of the accident reports.

Some of these reports cost as much as $900,000 -- all paid for by the taxpayer. Yet Goldstein refuses to make some of them public.

"I want to make sure these reports are not misinterpreted by misinformed people," Goldstein explains.

One important study, costing the taxpayer $170,000, was made by Public Service Research of Stamford, Conn., and is a treatise on the accident characteristics of the Chevy, Plymouth and Ford. While the report has been made public, the cars are identified only as "A, B, and C," so the reader has no way of knowing whether "A" refers to the Chevy, "B" to the Ford, "C" to Plymouth, or vice versa.

Another report, written by Prof. James Ryan of the University of Minnesota and costing $90,000, is on "crashworthy designs for automobiles." Dr. Ryan developed a hydraulic bumper which he tried out by crashing into a brick wall at a speed of 20 miles an hour.

Despite a weak heart, he survived. With any other bumper he would have been killed.

WHERE IS REUTHER?

After that, however, the industry treated him as a stepchild. His funds were cut off. He was dropped from the University of Minnesota and investigated by the auto industry. His original report has not been released, though paid for by the taxpayers. Ryan, however, is no crackpot. He has too many patents in his name, including the flight recorder now used on all airplanes to record what happens in aviation accidents.

Rep. John Moss, D-Calif., is indignant over this supression of vital facts to which the public is entitled and plans to cross-examine industry officials.

One report gathering dust in the HEW's division of accident prevention was written by Goldstein himself when a professor at George Washington University, on the subject of "driver behavior." It cost $260,000. No one really knows what the taxpayer got for his money.

Amazing fact is that two potent organizations affected by the accident probe haven't been heard from. They are: Walter Reuther's United Auto Workers and the Casualty Insurance people.

For years the insurance companies have been harping on the subject of auto safety. Every holiday weekend, they have helped announce the gruesome total of auto fatalities. Yet no indication has come from the insurance companies that they would like to testify regarding government moves to insure auto safety. The insurance companies apparently want to stand on the side of industrial power, not public safety.

This column is supposed to report what goes on behind the scenes in Washington, so here is a report on what has been going on behind the scenes in the Sen. Tom Dodd investigation.

Early in our development of this story, Jack Anderson notified the FBI that we had certain important documents pertaining to the ethics of a key senator, and invited the FBI around to study and evaluate the documents.

Mr. Anderson, I might add, not having been around Washington as long as I, labors under the impression that the FBI is anxious to root out and suppress wrong-doing wherever it may be -- even in high places.

The FBI, therefore, with Mr. Anderson's cooperation photographed every scrap of evidence we had. When some of the photos didn't develop clearly, the FBI even came back and rephotographed.

Jack had also been working with half a dozen prospective witnesses, all former Dodd employees, to tell the FBI what they knew of Dodd's misconduct. These were young people who had been shocked at what was happening in Dodd's office and departed. They felt under moral obligation to report what was happening.

Mr. Anderson offered to produce these witnesses, no strings attached, for the FBI.

FBI CROSS-EXAMINES

The G-men called on the witnesses all right, but didn't ask a single question about Dodd, his conduct, whether he had diverted funds from testimonial dinners to his own pocket and whether he had acted on behalf of a foreign agent, Gen. Julius Klein.

Instead, the FBI cross-examined these young people about the alleged theft of Dodd's documents. They also heckled them about other stories Jack Anderson and I had written, including how we got the unpublished manuscript of the Cosa Nostra squealer, Joe Valachi. What this had to do with the Dodd case is hard to explain, but the FBI didn't try to explain it.

These witnesses are clean-cut young men and women, who believe senators are not above the law and that it should not be against the law to document corruption charges against a U.S. senator. They are not disgruntled employees who came running to us with information against their boss. We sought them out; it took weeks to persuade them that their first loyalty sould be to their country, not to Dodd.

However, the public can judge for itself these witnesses if they are ever given a chance to testify.

As fast as the FBI discovered the identity of the witnesses, they were bullied and badgered, hounded and harassed. One lost his job on a House committee; the news of his dismissal came from Dodd's office. Another, who decided it was his duty to testify against Dodd, felt it improper to remain in Dodd's office. Since submitting his resignation, he has been unable to find another job. Others have had their jobs threatened.

One woman, seven months pregnant, was grilled by agents for three hours. Another Senate employee, who simply had been gossiping about the case, hardly got back to his office before the G-men descended upon him and pumped him to find out what he knew.

Agents hauled some witnesses right into Dodd's office for cross-examination and behaved as if they were working for the Senator. Other witnesses were alternately soft-soaped and threatened with federal prosecution.

I have been around Washington a long time, but have never seen such an example of police state operation.

Such investigations, of course, do not happen by accident. They usually go beyond the attorney general, Mr. Katzenbach, an awfully nice guy, but a bit wishy-washy when it comes to standing up to the White House or the Senate Judiciary Committee of which Tom Dodd is a member.

Such investigations usually go right up to the President himself. Mr. Johnson has on his desk a direct private phone to J. Edgar Hoover. They are very old friends, dating back to the days when I used to visit in Lyndon's home when he was a gawky young congressman from Texas living just across the street from J. Edgar Hoover's well - appointed bachelor abode.

Lyndon is not only a friend of Hoover's but he is a friend of Dodd's. It takes a real friend to make the two trips he made to Connecticut to speak at two testimonial dinners which raised $100,000 for Tom's personal bank account.

After the 1961 testimonial, Dodd's political lieutenant, Ed Sullivan, wrote to him: "Charles McDonough (an insurance executive) drove Vice President Johnson back to the airport after dinner. On the way, he told Charlie under no condition would he miss your dinner. He said he considers you and Grace (Mrs. Dodd) amongst the best friends of he and Mrs. Johnson, and considers you on the Senate floor the best friend he has."

Lyndon did all right for Tom. He hoisted him to a choice position on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, ahead of other senators, a vantage point from which he was able to work more effectively for Gen. Julius Klein. And he almost picked Tom to run with him for vice president.

Such is part of the inside story of what goes on in Washington.

NEW YORK AP -- Do you wonder whether you are middle-aged?

Well, middle age is like success or life itself: It isn't a destination -- just part of the journey.

Nobody is born middle-aged; it is thrust upon us by time. If you keep your nose clean, wash behind your ears, and look both ways before crossing the street, sooner or later you will achieve middle age. It is one of the pallid laurels of successful living.

Some people, on reaching middle age, try to hide it, as though it were a shameful disease. Actually, of course, it isn't really a malady, although it can be catching.

In any case, it is foolish to try to camouflage the condition of middle age.

Undoubtedly, you are middle-aged if:

You'd rather grow tomatoes than roses, because you can only smell roses but you can eat tomatoes.

In a year you gulp more aspirin tablets than you do candy mints.

You suspect that anyone who chews gum in public is mentally deficient.

There is no doubt in your mind that the average teen-ager carries a switchblade knife and is a potential dope addict.

You dimly remember that the Lambeth Walk was a dance, but you shrug when anyone mentions the Frug. It isn't part of your vocabulary, and you don't want it to be.

Sitting on the bus going home you get angry because some younger fellow doesn't get up and give his seat to an old lady. You'd do it yourself -- if your feet didn't hurt you.

It annoys you if your wife buys a new piece of furniture. You'd rather have the old one reupholstered.

If you get a martini at lunch that isn't up to your standard, your secretary suffers for it the rest of the afternoon.

You hate to admit you're growing older, but you are miffed if your friends don't send you a card on your birthday.

What you don't give to the doctor, the dentist gets.

Trifles break down your morale. If you get a shirt back from the laundry with a button missing, that's just one more sign that the whole world's against you.

All the foods you like are bad for you, and all the foods you hate are good for you.

You are more comfortable in the comapny of a man whose prejudices you know than one whose cleverness you don't quite grasp.

After putting on one sock in the morning, you pause and sigh and take a deep breath before putting on the other sock.

Whatever anything costs, it isn't worth it -- and doesn't last as long as it used to.

You take life as it comes, realizing that no new mouth lotion is likely to improve your social position and no dandruff cure will win you promotion at the office.

Tipton Trio to Present Concert Here Saturday

The Tipton Trio will present the closing concert of the Delta Community Concert Association season at 8 p.m. Saturday in the junior high school auditorium.

Flutist - Director Albert Tipton won the fall complement of laurels when he brought the chamber orchestra to Community Concert members in 1957. Those who have followed his rise in the musical world agree that Tipton has never been willing to rest on those laurels and has constantly worked to increase his skill and improve his performance until now he is, as Leopold Stokowski described him, "a man of great musical experience and highest musical ideals.

These ideals have led him to select pianist Mary Norris, and Mario di Fiore, cellist, who with Tipton comprise a trio which will bring a rare treat to Sikeston.

Although not heard too often, the tonal combination of flute and cello with piano is beautiful. The brilliance and flexibility of the flute in the hands of a master flutist, coupled and contrasted with the warm and mellow tones of the cello will be amply demonstrated in Saturday's concert. Included will be solo numbers by each member of the trio as each is a true concert-artist in his own right.

"The price of greatness is responsibility. If the people of the United States had remained in a mediocre station, struggling with the wilderness, absorbed in their own affairs, and a factor of no consequence in the movements of the world, they might have remained forgotten and undisturbed, beyond their protecting ocean."

On the Set With 'The King And I'

By Thedamay Cleek

Thelma Bush is in charge of choreography for "The King and I." One of the most difficult but delightful surprises in this popular musical by Rogers and Hammerstein is the play within a play, the ballet of "The Small House of Uncle Thomas."

As Tuptim, a slave girl of the king, narrates the story, the excitement mounts as Eliza flees from "King Simon of Legree" and his thirsty bloodhounds.

Eliza, portrayed by Patty Bush, sets off in search of her lover, "Angel George," played by Cyndi Waters. King Simon has sold George to a faraway province, "Oheeo." In the "journey" and ensuing "chase" Eliza is always just a short distance ahead of the "King," played by Kathy Tenkhoff, and his guards and dogs.

Many obstacles such as rainstorms, mountains, rivers, "etc., etc., etc." makes poor Eliza wonder if she will ever escape. However, Buddah makes a miracle and Eliza safely crosses the frozen river and is re-united with lover George. Of course as in all good stories, the villain dies and in this version of the story, Topsy, played by Janie Vandivort, dances for joy.

But with blessings of Buddah also comes sacrifice and Little Eva, played by Viney Ralph, must die and go to the arms of Buddah.

Other characters are Uncle Thomas, played by Debbie Wheeler, guards of the king, Sally Mitchell, Anne Heckemeyer, and Cyd Mitchell. The bloodhounds are Kim Bailey and Terri Terrell and the following supporting dancers: Sandy Simpson, Janet Caldwell, Marilyn Bowman, Peggy McMullin, Linda Hale, Beverly Barnes and Nancye Trigg.

The costumes for this ballet are quite remote from the familiar "Uncle Toms Cabin" and incidently, so is the action. There is a pleasant surprise in store for theatre-goers as the Siamese children give their version of this famous American classic.

Nora McMullin is hard at work with her crew on costuming and I will give a report on this phase of the play next.

Community Club Meets With Mrs. Croom

Mrs. Craig is the member from this area on the Missouri Council of the Arts, which is subsidiary to the National Council of the Arts. New York, California, and Missouri are the only states which have set up their own organization and are functioning. The purpose is to make available to small communities cultural opportunities which they could not afford without outside help.

Statewide committees in various areas on interest have been appointed, but there are many complications when concrete situations arise and it will take time to work out details.

The council welcomes opportunities to inform the public about what it is trying to accomplish and groups should contact the council for information as to what is available and how they may help.

The lesson on home lighting was given by the home management leaders, Mrs. Phillip Coppage and Mrs. R. L. Abernathy. They touched on all phases of the subject--decoration, convenience in work areas, protection, mood-setting -- but their main emphasis was on light for reading and all close work, with a plea for a well-lighted area for school home work.

The club voted to continue to provide funds for a scholarship at Southeast Missouri College in Cape Girardeau for the coming year.

A good memory is one trained to forget the trivial.

TO INTERESTED STUDENTS AND THEIR PARENTS:

It is best to come to the school office for interviews. There is absolutely no obligation. You will not be urged to enroll, and no school representative will be sent to your home.

Our best indication of the number which might be expected to enroll for the courses beginning in June is the number of inquiries by mail, telephone, and office visits. These are substantially greater this year than last. Prompt action on your own enrollment is advisable. Some students have already completed enrollment.

The best time for interviews is in the afternoon between the hours of one and two-thirty. Appointment is not an absolute necessity; but if made, it will often save time for both the student and us. The school office will be open on Saturdays from nine to noon, beginning April 30 (Saturday afternoons by appointment).

Free bulletin and literature will be mailed on request.

Dan Kern Hurls No Hitter In Sub-District Tourney At Oran

The Sikeston Bulldogs once again beat the Eagles of Oran yesterday as Dan Kern pleased the fans with a no-hit pitching performance. Kern struck out five and walked four in the 7-0 decision. This extends the Bulldog record to 4 wins against no losses.

ORAN -- Richard Montgomery led off the first inning for the Bulldogs by popping out to the pitcher. Wayne Limbaugh flied to left field. Mike Garner by a pitch, and Rudy Manley struck out to end the Bulldog offensive in the first inning.

In the bottom of the first Schaeffer struck out, Clark drew a base on balls, Metz forced Clark out at second, and Hahn grounded out to first-baseman Mike Couch.

Mike Couch, Jim Ramsey, and Max Ellison struck out in order in the Bulldog half of the second inning. Oran's Gosche grounded out to second, Johnson struck out, Graham walked, and Whorton grounded out to end the second inning.

In the third, Carl Barnett struck out, then Dan Kern singled and advanced to second on a passed ball, Richard Montgomery then grounded to shortstop. The shortstop threw to third in an attempt to force Kern but the third-baseman dropped the ball in a collision with Kern. Montgomery got caught between first and second, but managed to reach second safely. Limbaugh then reached first on a fielder's choice, and Kern scored on a close play. Garner then tripled, scoring Montgomery and Limbaugh, coming in to score when the ball was thrown wild. Manley then struck out for the second out. Couch singled, Ramsey walked, and Ellison was hit by a pitch to load the bases. Barnett struck out to end the inning for the Bulldogs.

In the top of the fourth, Kern was thrown out at first. Montgomery grounded to shortstop for the second out. Then Limbaugh doubled, Garner singled, and Manley scored Limbaugh on an error. Couch ended the top of the fourth by striking out.

Ramsey reached first on an error on the center fielder to open the fifth. Ellison was thrown out, Bailey struck out, and Kern struck out, stranding Ramsey on third base.

Montgomery led off in the sixth with a single, matched by Limbaugh, and then Manley scored both runners with a single, and went to second on the throw to the plate. Couch struck out and Dave Shy, substituting for Ramsey, grounded to second base for the final out.

In the final inning Wiss, substituting for Ellison, drew a walk, then Bailey flied out to right field, Kern struck out, Montgomery doubled, moving Wiss to third, Limbaugh grounded out to third, ending the Bulldog offensive game.

Coach Hal Lane said about yesterday's game, "I think the boys did a really fine job. The hitting is improving, as is the defensive game. There were fifteen putouts on the infield, and only one ball reached the outfield. I'm really proud of them."

Sikeston once again outclassed Oran in the statistical side of the game. The Bulldogs outhit the Eagles 9-0, again showing the power of their hitting and defense. Sikeston now has scored 26 runs on 38 hits, as compared to 4 runs on 8 hits by the opponents.

Richard Montgomery leads the Bulldog hitting with an impressive .529, followed by Wayne Limbaugh with .429.

Sikeston's game scheduled for today has been postponed due to the rain.

Richland beat Scott Central 4-2 in the first game by scoring 3 runs in the final inning and defeated Advance in the third game by the same score.

Phillies Shut-Out Pirates 5-0

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Ken Johnson's variety of 12 pitches might have fooled Willie Mays, but as far as Jose Pagan is concerned none could have been as evasive as Jim Bunning's bunt pitch.

Bunning so befuddled Pagan that he obliterated a budding Pittsburgh rally and went on to pitch Philadelphia to a 5-0 victory Monday night.

Johnson held Mays hitless in Atlanta's 5-0 triumph over San Francisco, preventing the Giants' star from setting a National League records for career home runs.

"I wasn't thinking about his record," Johnson said afterward. "I was just thinking about winning. I just try not to give him the same pitch twice. I have six pitches, and I throw them from two different angles so that gives me 12 different pitches."

Pagan didn't have much to say after his performance against Bunning. It came in the third inning of a scoreless game and followed no-out singles by pitcher Bob Veale and Matty Alou.

Pagan came to the plate intending to bunt, but he let Bunning's pitch go by, and Veale was trapped off second. The throw from catcher Bob Uecker to shortstop Dick Groat nailed the first out.

Then while Bunning was concentrating on Pagan, Alou stole second. And when Bunning concerned himself with Alou, the pitcher threw the ball into center field, allowing Alou to reach third.

By this time Pagan had two strikes on him, but that didn't stop him from pursuing the bunt. The squeeze play was called for.

Pagan, however, missed the pitch for strike three and the second out and Alou was trapped off third and run down for the third out.

It was almost as if Pagan swung — or didn't swing — into a triple play.

Johnson limited the Giants to three hits while retiring Mays on a pop up, a strikeout and a liner. Mays, seeking his 512th home run, also walked. Johnson received support from Lee Thomas' three-run homer and Hank Aaron's two-run blast.

Bunning stopped the Pirates on five hits and got the only run he needed when Rich Allen homered in the fourth. The Phillies added four runs in the sixth, two on a single by Cookie Rojas.

Mike Cuellar pitched a five-hitter as Houston handed Cincinnati its seventh defeat in the last eight games. John Bateman doubled across an Astro run in the fifth, and Jim Gentile snapped a 1-1 with a run-scoring single in the sixth.

Griffith Wins Middle Weight Title

By JIM HACKLEMAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — An explosive right-hand punch that traveled scant inches carried Emile Griffith to his second world boxing championship.

But to the flashy Virgin Islander with the steely muscles and quick moves, the blow might as well have been an accident.

"I never tried to knock him out — never, at any point. Not even when I had him down. The thought never crossed my mind."

But the short right that floored Dick Tiger in the ninth round of Tuesday night's 15-rounder at Madison Square Garden meant the difference. It enabled Griffith to take the middleweight title away from the 37-year-old Nigerian in a tight decision.

The new middleweight champ was a bit on the defensive about the defense-oriented fight he made against Tiger. He backpedaled considerably and was not his usual aggressive self.

"I just kept moving," he yelled, straining to make his voice heard above the din in his packed, steam-hot dressing room. "I'm a boxer . . . I just wanted to keep moving. I opened up when I had to."

Tiger was angry — close to bitter. But the only challenge he made to the outcome was an enigmatic: "I hope the winner of this fight got the decision."

He questioned Griffith's caution, saying, "It takes two fighters to make a fight," and "I thought he would come to me, but he ran away."

Cards Blank Los Angeles

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The St. Louis Cardinals received strong pitching and timely hitting Monday night to blank the Los Angeles Dodgers 2-0.

The Kansas City Athletics also received a strong hurling effort, but almost no hitting, and fell to the Cleveland Indians 2-0.

Lefthander Larry Jaster allowed the Dodgers only seven hits, and handed the losers their third straight shutout defeat.

Curt Flood doubled home a run in the sixth inning, and later scored himself for both of St. Louis' runs.

In Cleveland, the A's managed only a bloop single by Jose Tartabull as lefthander Sam McDowell kept the weak-hitting Athletics well in hand. The Indians wrapped up the victory when Larry Brown hammered a two-out, two-run single in the sixth inning.

Roland Sheldon took the loss, his second without a victory.

Rocky Colavito set an American League record in the game. The Indian rightfielder has now gone 195 consecutive games without an error.

Righthander Chuck Dobson (1-0) will pitch tonight against Cleveland righthander Gary Bell (1-0) as the A's attempt to shake a two-game losing streak.

In Los Angeles, Bob Gibson (2-0) will go after his third straight win. He will be opposed by the Dodgers' Sandy Koufax (2-0).

McDowell Blanks Athletics On One Hit

BY HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

It takes two to tango but the way Sam McDowell and Del Crandall were working on Kansas City, it looked more like a torrid twist with the Athletics in the middle.

McDowell, Cleveland's fireballing left-hander, hurled a one-hitter Monday night, beat the Athletics 2-0 and afterwards he gave most of the credit to his journeyman catcher, Crandall.

"I don't want to take anything away from our other catchers," the Indian ace said, "but Del has the experience. He came out to the mound twice and both times he caught things I was doing wrong."

McDowell, now 3-0, has had Crandall as his batterymate in each of his four starts and he likes the idea of pitching to the 36-year-old veteran.

"I shook him off a couple of times in the opener," said McDowell. "It's different now. We're working together in sort of an easy rhythm. Like a dance team."

McDowell was waltzing along on a no-hitter for five innings against Kansas City before Jose Tartabull's looping single leading off the sixth broke the spell.

The hit was the only one the A's managed as McDowell struck out eight. Larry Brown drove in both Indian runs with a two-out, bases-loaded single in the sixth inning.

Elsewhere in the American League, Denny McLain hurled a four-hitter as Detroit blanked Minnesota 3-0, Chicago shaded Washington 3-2 despite a titantic home run by Frank Howard, and Boston handed New York its seventh straight loss 8-5.

In the National League, Houston edged Cincinnati 7-1, Atlanta blanked San Francisco 5-0, Philadelphia shut out Pittsburgh 5-0 and St. Louis extended Los Angeles' runless string to three games with a 2-0 victory.

McLain got home run support from Norm Cash and Al Kaline to beat the Twins for his third victory of the season. Cash walloped a bases-empty homer in the fourth and McLain protected the slim lead until Kaline's two-run shot in the eighth gave him some breathing space.

Tom McCraw's ninth inning sacrifice fly beat the Senators for Chicago but Howard's homer stole the show. It was still rising when it zoomed into the mezzanine seats in deepest center field, 480 feet from home plate. It was believed to be the longest homer in the five-year history of D.C. Stadium.

Howard pooh-poohed the excitement over his shot. "I've hit 'em further," he said. "Would you believe it?"

Teammate Don Lock didn't. He was convinced it was Howard's longest shot.

Bulldog Netmen Defeated 3-2

The Sikeston Bulldogs Tennis team met Chaffee yesterday and were defeated, but only by a narrow 3-2 margin. Sikeston did however win all three of their exhibition matches, with Tommy Eaton beating Stubbs 6-1 in singles and Brad Crumpecker and Dean Childers beating Colley and O'Riley 6-3 in doubles. In the other exhibition doubles Wythe Miller and Gary Grant beat Tucker and Hampton 6-2. In the regular matches Robinson of Chaffee beat Billy Dickerson 9-7, Sikeston's Henry Lippert beat Sadler of Chaffee 8-6, and Dean Childers beat Chaffee's Moyers 8-3, giving Sikeston a 2-1 edge in the singles.

Sikeston lost both of their regular doubles though as Robinson and Sadler beat Dickerson and Lippert 8-4 and Miller and Humes fell to Moyers and Margrabe 8-6. The tennis Bulldogs meet Cape tomorrow at the high school courts at 3:30. The team appreciates any spectator who drives out to watch them compete.

Sikeston's golf team traveled to Cape where they were beat four strokes by Cape Central on their tough home course at the Cape Girardeau Country Club. Charles Stamp shot the low number of strokes for Sikeston with a 40. He was followed by Chuck Meyer who fired a 41, and Charles Atchison and David Whiteaker both shot a 45. Spradling was the low man for Cape with a 38, followed by Cochran with a 40, Stiver with a 44 and Kaiser with a 45. Monday the golf team journeys to Dexter to face their team. All the area golf teams are fairly evenly matched this year and though Dexter has a home course advantage, the contest could go either way.

CRAPPIE FISHERMEN SAY this is the time of year for crappie fishing. Virtually every lake in the Middle West has an abundant supply of these big pan fish. One of the most successful angling forays coming to our attention this week was made by a quartet of district men last week at Sardis Lake in Mississippi, where in two days of fishing with large minnows they took 150 crappie running from one to 2 1/4 pounds each, and a pair of good bass. They fished out of Holiday Lodge. The lake is not unknown to local anglers, many have fished there in the past. Making the trip were Grady Lunceford of Memphis, Tenn.; L. H. Shipman of Illmo, Nunnie Miller of Oran and E. R. Gemeinhardt of Bell City.

Most men think this GMC Pickup costs a lot more than it really does.

Can you blame them?
It looks like big money. Take the exclusive V-6 engine. Many have gone 150,000 miles and more without major overhaul. About half that is average for most competitive engines, but the V-6 isn't just average. Four headlamps, not two. And that GMC nameplate means it's built, sold and serviced by truck people. The real price? I'm waiting to surprise you.

Our Bourbon is as old as the Hills.

Back in 1879, William and Scipio Hill, a pair of Kentucky cousins, opened a distillery.

They made precious little of their Bourbon, but what they made came up precious good. Rich and full. And so incredibly smooth that the Hill cousins were able to sell their whiskey for three times the going price.

Today, Hill & Hill is still made the same old way. As patiently as the Hill cousins meant it to be.

So be thankful you can get your Bourbon straight from the Hills of Kentucky.

Fire Destroys Chaffee Home

CHAFFEE -- A two-story frame house was destroyed by fire Sunday. The house occupied by the Willis Williams family, was located at 312 Helen.

Firemen were called at 11:30 p.m. and reported the fire had been burning some time. The fire apparently started in the kitchen, but the cause was not determined. The Williams family was not at home.

Firemen said there was a threat the fire might spread since the houses in the vicinity are on 40-foot lots.

Damage to the house was estimated at $3,000 to $4,000. No damage estimate of the contents has been made.

The Prayer

For Today From The Upper Room

TUESDAY, APRIL 26, 1966

"I have spoken thus to you, so that my joy may be in you, and your joy complete." (John 15;11, NEB)

PRAYER: God, our Father, grant us wisdom and strength that we may be patient in loving our neighbors and in serving Thee. Renew in us the joy of knowing Thee and make us Thine instruments in proclaiming that joy to others around us. In Jesus' name. Amen.

Practical Nurses Go To Meeting

Students of the Practical Nurses class of the Sikeston Public school attended the 25th annual convention of National Association for Practical Nurse Education and Service, Inc., held in the Kentucky Hotel in Louisville, Ky., April 18-21.

Mrs. Clare Eisenbach, coordinator of the training program, Mrs. Madge Meacham, R. N. and Mrs. Maude Strietman, R. N., instructors of the class accompanied the 17 students.

The convention theme was "Education for a Changing Role --Service for a Changing World." Student day activities opened the convention on Monday, April 18 with the ribbon cutting ceremony at 9 a.m. and a tour of the exhibits conducted especially for the students. In recognition of NAPNES Silver Anniversary, the student luncheon held in the Flag Room of the hotel featured a fashion show depicting changes in Practical Nurses' uniforms through the past 25 years.

The featured speaker was Mrs. Amy Freeman Lee, author, lecturer and artist from San Antonio, Texas. The afternoon session was a panel discussion with representatives from the Army Nurse Corps, Peace Corps, the visiting nurse service and industrial nursing discussing new horizons in career opportunities for practical nurses.

The grand march of the students in uniform was a highlight of the convention assembly in the Crystal Ballroom, Brown Hotel in the evening.

The keynote speaker of the assembly was Howard Lee Bost, Ph.D., deputy director, Bureau of Health Insurance, Social Security Administration, Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Uncle Sam to Increase Withholding Bite

WASHINGTON (AP) — Uncle Sam begins next week to take a bigger chunk of the average American paycheck to help finance the Viet Nam war.

It is the first graduated withholding system in U.S. history and for millions it means less take-home pay. But for others, especially low income families, less federal income tax will be deducted from their paychecks.

Everybody's over-all tax bill for the year will remain the same. The new system is designed merely to bring the amount withheld from paychecks closer to a person's actual taxes.

Since the plan will withdraw about $800 million from the economy by Dec. 31, government economists also hope it will dampen inflationary trends which could lead to a tax increase later.

Beginning May 1, taxes will be withheld from paychecks at six different rates —14, 15, 17, 20, 25 and 30 per cent.

At present income taxes are withheld at a uniform 14 per cent based only on the taxpayer's salary and number of exemptions he claims.

The new system includes these factors but also takes into account the standard deduction and whether a taxpayer is married. Thus, a taxpayer can take advantage of the split income provisions of federal tax law as part of his withholding for the first time.

The split income provisions allow a married couple a lower tax rate. Previously, this could be used only in figuring taxes at the end of the year. Under the new system, taxes can be withheld at this lower rate.

Cochran New Governor of Rotary

FARMINGTON -- Lee G. Cochran, a member of the Jackson Rotary club, was introduced as the governor-nominee of district 609, Rotary International, at the annual district conference Saturday.

Cochran will become governor upon his formal election at the Rotary International convention in Denver, Colo., in June. He will attend the International Rotary Assembly at Lake Placid, N. Y., prior to the convention.

All but two of the district's Rotary Clubs -- Alton and Cardwell -- were represented at the conference, arranged by District Gov. Harry Vogt of Ellington and committees of the Farmington Rotary Club.

Louis L. Roth, member of the St. Louis Rotary Club, past governor and past Rotary International director, represented R. I. President C. P. H. Teenstra of Holland.

The Rotary Club of Sikeston issued an invitation for next year's district conference. Incoming presidents will vote on the site at a district assembly of incoming officers in Poplar Bluff, June 29.

Parma B&PW Club Attends Convention

PARMA -- Delegates of the Parma Business and Professional Women's Club left Fri- Kansas City, where they attended the 1966 State BPW Conattend the 1966 State BPW Convention. Delegates from Caruthersville, Hayti, and Kennett went on the bus. Parma delegates boarded the bus in Malden and stops were made at Dexter for delegates from the Dexter, Sikeston and Cape Girardeau Clubs; and at Poplar Bluff for their delegates and those from Doniphan.

These area clubs make up District Six. There are 119 clubs in the state with more than 6,400 members. In the national federation there are 175,000 members. In addition to the United States, there are clubs in 28 other countries.

This year the convention had special significance for the Malden BPW. At the convention held April 22-24 at the Continental Hotel in Kansas City, Mrs. Margaret Rone of Hayti was installed state president for 1966-67. The Malden club has been involved the past few months in preparation for this occasion. In December the local club was host for a planning meeting for the convention and again in March to make final preparations for the installation of Mrs. Rone.

District Six was in charge of the installation breakfast at 9 a.m. Sunday morning, held in the Ballroom of the hotel. The theme of the breakfast was "Cotton Carnival," since Mrs. Rone is employed by Southeast Missouri Compress Company in Hayti. Each club in District Six made a miniature float for the parade of clubs for the president's table at the breakfast. Other carnival motifs decorated the individual tables, all made by District Six members.

Miss Georgia Green, member of the Malden BPW Club, sang as part of the devotional on the Sunday morning program, and at the Golden Key Banquet on Saturday evening in the Grand Ballroom of Hotel Muehlbach.

The Hayti BPW Club held a reception following the Saturday evening banquet honoring Mrs. Rone. Mrs. Mary Eaker of the Malden Club and Mrs. Gaye Ramsey of the Parma Club were on the entertainment committee for the occasion.

Saturday noon there was a special luncheon honoring all state Gold Card members. These members had secured five or more new club members during the past year.

It takes 6½ seconds to fasten a seat belt

Best investment in time you'll ever make

6½ seconds could save your life. Or prevent serious injury. That's all the time it takes to pick up a seat belt . . . and fasten it.

If everyone did this—every time—the National Safety Council says at least 5,000 lives could be saved each year, and serious injuries reduced by one-third.

Here's a simple reminder for you and your passengers the next time you drive—"Buckle your seat belt, please."

Jets Down MIG

SAIGON (AP)—An American supersonic jet fighter shot down an MIG21 today over North Viet Nam, a U.S. spokesman announced.

The MIG, newest and fastest type used by the Communists in Asia, was hit by Sidewinder missiles in a brief aerial duel 65 miles northeast of the North Vietnamese capital of Hanoi, the spokesman said.

It was downed by an F4C Phantom fighter in a dogfight in which two Phantoms attacked two MIG21s.

Neither of the U.S. planes was damaged, the spokesman said.

It was the first MIG21 kill of the Viet Nam war and the eighth Soviet-built fighter downed in the conflict. The previous seven were the older • version MIG17s.

The pilot of the destroyed MIG was believed to have ejected before his flaming plane crashed, the spokesman said.

The Sidewinder missile used against the MIG is a heat-seeking projectile which seeks out and climbs into the hot tailpipe of enemy aircraft.

The spokesman did not disclose how many Sidewinders were fired. He said further details of the encounter would be available Wednesday.

Two of the delta-winged Communist fighters and two Phantoms dueled undamaged to a standoff north of Hanoi Monday. American planes and the Soviet-built MIGs had clashed three times Saturday.

Both aircraft are capable of flying better than twice the speed of sound. The Phantoms are rated slightly faster, but the MIGs are perhaps a little more maneuverable and represent a serious threat to the American jets.

The reappearance of the high-performance MIG21s bore out belief that the Communists mean to challenge U.S. air superiority over North Viet Nam as American planes strike closer and harder at vital areas around Hanoi, the capital, and Haiphong, the chief port.

Until Saturday, U.S. jets had been undisturbed by enemy planes over the Communist north for 10 months. As on Saturday, the MIGs Monday were not identified by nationality.

U. S. planes flew a total of 65 missions over the north Monday. The targets included a suspected surface - to - air missile site, petroleum storage areas, ferry complexes and highway bridges.

Optimistic About Individual Rights

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—Dr. John P. Humphrey, "Mr. Human Rights" at the United Nations for almost 20 years, believes man is winning his battle to maintain his individual rights in a society growing more complex every day.

At 61, Humphrey is retiring as director of the U.N. Division of Human Rights to return to the law faculty of McGill University in Montreal. He had been named dean of students there just before he took his new U.N. assignment in 1946. He is a native of Hampton, N.B.

He is not retiring from work in the field of human rights. He has been elected to membership on the Subcommission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities — a subsidiary group of the U.N. Human Rights Commission. He will attend meetings of the subcommission in January as one of its 18 experts.

In December 1948, the U.N. General Assembly adopted the universal declaration of human rights — the culmination of two years of effort of the Human Rights Commission under the chairmanship of Eleanor Roosevelt.

At the time, Mrs. Roosevelt stressed that the declaration was not binding legally. Humphrey takes the view that now the declaration has become part of customary international law aimed at protecting the individual against organized society.

He says this is so because of the general recognition the declaration has received in the international community. He says it is part of a new body of law which has given the individual new status over the past 20 years.

French Charge NATO Military Command Is Now out of Date

PARIS AP -- Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville says France is quitting the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's military command because it is out of date, but it doesn't want its friendship with the United States to diminish.

"In the nuclear era, this organization does not deal with the essential element of defense which is nuclear defense," Couve de Murville said. "France does not seek a special advantage. She is adopting herself to a new situation and this can only have advantages for the equilibrium and peace in Europe."

President Charles de Gaulle's government contends that NATO's nuclear arsenal is almost entirely owned and controlled by the United States and that NATO has no effective hand in it.

Replying in writing to questions submitted by The Associated Press, the foreign minister said France values American friendship highly. He denied that his government plans a nonaggression pact with the Soviet Union and reiterated that the French would like to "contribute to a peaceful settlement" in Viet Nam.

Couve de Murville said that in withdrawing from the military structure of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, "we are acting normally as any government, in the interests of our country, and we believe besides that what we are doing is in no manner contrary to the well understood interests of our allies."

He stressed that France intends to remain part of the North Atlantic Treaty signed in 1949. He pointed out that the military organization was developed after the treaty was signed and "is in no way a condition of it." The United States feels, however, that the military organization is an essential part of the alliance.

Couve de Murville declared that France had no intention of offending the United States by its stand on NATO or conversion of its excess balance of payments into gold.

"American friendship is an ancient precious value to which we are all attached in France and which we do not wish to see disappear or even diminish," he said.

He noted that the conversion of dollar holdings into gold was provided for by the Bretton Woods agreements and said the United States had always done this in the same circumstances.

France notified its NATO allies last month that U.S. and Canadian forces on its soil must leave within a year and that NATO headquarters in France must withdraw by the same time. The United States wants to extend the time limit for at least another year.

Asked what France proposes to do about paying the costs for relocating NATO, Couve de Murville said: "Settlement of financial problems is a matter for negotiations, according to the provisions of the NATO accords or the Franco-American accords."

The foreign minister denied that French policy was maneuvering the United States into closer cooperation with West Germany in military matters.

The World's Weekend

Intensified Air War in Prospect

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The prospect of intensified air war over Viet Nam appeared during the weekend.

American Phantom F4C Supersonic jet fighters battled two new Soviet-built-high-performance MIG21s Saturday for the first time. Neither side scored.

In another encounter, U. S. PILOTS SHOT DOWN TWO MIG 17s in a five-minute dogfight. American fighters had three encounters with Communist aircraft Saturday -- the first aerial battles since last July 10.

No American planes were lost in the dogfights but two air force F105s were lost apparently from ground fire.

In another weekend Viet Nam development, the South Vietnamese government announced plans to name a 100-member committee to carry out its pledge of national elections. Ten thousand Roman Catholics staged an orderly Sunday demonstration in Saigon in a show of strength.

In India, the second train bombing in a week in rebel-ridden Assam State killed 39 persons and injured more than 65 at Diphu village in the jungled Mikir Hills. Naga tribesmen were blamed. The blast, third in two months, brought to 133 the number of persons killed in such explosions.

The Soviet Union has promised aid to the new leftist regime in Syria to build a huge dam on the biblical Euphrates River. The move could become another Soviet propaganda bonanza in the Middle East, much like the Aswan Dam in Egypt.

The Gemini 9 pilots outlined how they plan to simulate three rendezvous maneuvers on their three-day flight starting May 17 from Cape Kennedy. Air Force Lt. Col. Thomas P. Stafford is the command pilot with Navy Lt. Cmdr. Eugene A. Cernan his companion. Cernan is scheduled to make a 2-hour-25-minute space walk.

The Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee said "the reluctance of the Department of Defense to invest in nuclear-powered surface warships" poses a threat to the nation's security. It urged Congress "to be alert to assure the reluctance . . . does not cause our Navy to lapse into obsolescence."

matter of fact

The forerunner of the American magazine was the almanac. In the 18th and 19th centuries in the United States there were about 2,000 almanacs printed for various trades, organizations, businesses, military and religious groups and finally as an advertising medium. The most famous was Benjamin Franklin's "Poor Richard's Almanac;" the most popular was the "Astronomical Diary and Almanac" with an annual circulation of 60,000 copies.

THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

A Review of the 1964 Term

ELECTIONS
(Conclusion)

In spite of such clear evidence that the Fourteenth Amendment has nothing whatever to do with the right to vote, in Carrington vs Rash, the Court held by a 7 to 1 vote, with Chief Justice Warren not participating, that a provision of the Texas Constitution and laws which withheld the right to vote from servicemen moving into the State until they had left active military service violated the Fourteenth Amendment. Mr. Justice Stewart, writing for the majority, did not refer to a single bit of evidence from the debates on the Fourteenth Amendment. Instead, his sole authority consisted of excerpts from recent Supreme Court cases which enunciate the philosophy of the Court regarding voting rights. In his lone dissent, Mr. Justice Harlan said:

"In making this holding the Court totally ignores, as it did in last Term's reapportionment cases, Reynolds v. Sims . . . all the history of the Fourteenth Amendment and the course of judicial decisions which together plainly show that the Equal Protection Clause . . . If that history does not prove what I think it does, we are at least entitled to be told why. While I cannot express surprise over today's decision after the reapportionment cases, which though bound to follow I continue to believe are constitutionally indefensible, I can and do respectfully but earnestly, record my protest against this further extension of the Federal judicial power into the political affairs of the States . . .

"I deplore the added impetus which this decision gives to the current tendency of judging constitutional questions on the basis of abstract "justice" unleashed from the limiting principles that go with our constitutional system. Constitutionally principled adjudication, high in the process of which is due recognition of the just demands of federalism, leaves ample room for the protection of individual rights. A constitutional democracy which in order to cope with seeming needs of the moment is willing to temporize with its basic distribution and limitation of governmental powers will sooner or later find itself in trouble."

As if it were not enough to extend the Fourteenth Amendment, the Court also started stretching the Twenty-Fourth (anti-Federal poll tax) Amendment. It held that Virginia could not require a voter who did not pay a poll tax to file a certificate of residence. Although the Amendment outlaws a poll tax only in a Federal election, the Court found that filing a simple piece of paper six months before the election certifying to local residence was such a "cumbersome procedure" as to make it "far preferable to mail in the poll tax payment upon receipt of the bill." Interestingly enough, the Court mentions that the State may enforce its residence requirements by annual personal registration lines for an hour or more, Virginia's statute would seem to be the very essence of simplicity and convenience. To say that it is a more "cumbersome procedure" to require a voter to mail in a piece of paper at any time at his convenience six months before an election, from wherever he is, than to force him to go at a set date and place, both of which may be very inconvenient to him, to register, is surely to put a strain on common sense. To dress such a bizarre notion in the garb of constitutional law is an enshrinement of absurdity which not even the most zealous opponent of poll taxes could have intended.

Tensions Under Study

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Work addicts are urged to take a work break instead of just relying on more coffee.

The neurotic ways of the business executive who thinks the company can't function without him are coming under closer inspection by both physicians and corporate management.

The doctors worry about the social and personal problems that can build up from executive tensions. These sometimes lead to mental or physical breakdowns.

Management is worrying about what tension in the executive suite may be doing to employe morale. Also there is the pressing problem of how growing tension may affect the making of crucial dollar and cents decisions.

Like drug, alcohol and gambling addicts, the one who is being hooked by his work and by his preoccupation with it is usually the last to recognize his trouble or to admit his addiction. Instead, he develops all kinds of physical symptoms that physicians find hard to trace to physical causes.

"Executive behavior of practrace to physical causes.

"Excessive behavior of practically any kind begets addiction," says Dr. Nelson Bradley of the Parkside Clinic, Des Plaines, Ill. "For the drinker, anything above the one or two drinks necessary to gain the relaxation he legitimately may seek is excessive behavior. In the case of the executive and his workload, I believe that anything over a 40-hour work week is excessive behavior, particularly in this day of good corporation organization and extremely competent subordinates."

The work addict will plead a rush of demands, Dr. Bradley says, when "the events leading to the rush have actually been instigated by the man himself."

Dr. William C. Menninger, founder of the Menninger Clinic of Industrial Mental Health, urges that in addition to regular physical examinations for key men, companies also provide regular emotional checkups for their executives.

"It is rare for anyone to see his physician because of tension, but physicians' offices are filled with patients who complain of symptoms resulting from tensions," notes Dr. Theodore G. Klumpp, president of Winthrop Laboratories, a division of Sterling Drug.

He holds that a certain amount of stress, different for each person, is a powerful spur to creativity or productivity. But the extremes of stress, from either intensity or duration, are harmful. Tensions are revealed in nervousness or sleeplessness, diarrhea, spastic colitis, loss of weight or gaining of too much weight too fast.

If you're becoming a work addict, he suggests a work break. And for most executives the best work break is a regular program of physical exercise.

Pushups won't do, Dr. Klumpp contends. Nor will walking, swimming, golf, tennis or bicycling — if done only on Sunday. The work break has to be taken every day. And above all beware of that common advice to "take it easy."

Don't worry about physical strain, the doctor and drug company executive adds. It's not a "fulfilling, rewarding life to be afraid to live for fear of dying."

Mrs. Steward Is Hostess to Extension Club

The home of Mrs. Fred Steward was the meeting place of the Sikeston Extension Club Monday, April 18.

The meeting was presided over by President Malcolm. She reminded the members of the club's annual bus trip to St. Louis and the Spring Activity to be May 4 at 1:30 p.m. in the community room of the Security National Bank. The theme will be "The Circus, Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow." Earl Allen will provide entertainment.

After the business meeting, a social hour was enjoyed as Mrs. Steward and co-hostess, Mrs. O. C. Lewis served 15 members and two guests samples of the quick meal which they prepared during the club meeting. "Quick Meals" was also the lesson for the April meeting.

Mrs. A. J. Heuiser and Mrs. J. N. Walker were guests of the club and Mrs. Heuiser decided to become a member of the club. The club also welcomed back Mrs. Harry Buckles who has been away several months in Texas.

HEARNES CITES NEED FOR MORE STATE ACTION

"The object of this administration has been to interpose Jefferson City between the state and the federal government," Gov. Warren E. Hearnes said last week.

The federal government has stepped in with the grant-in-aid programs to meet needs where the state governments have failed to act, Hearnes said.

During the current special session of the legislature, several members of the Senate have decried state government in Missouri for jumping at federal funds when matching funds were required. One bill in contention provided for improvement of scenic beauty along federal highways with a $3 million bonus involved.

Hearnes pointed out that people no longer are taking anything and everything because federal funds are involved. There are many areas in which federal assistance is necessary, he said, but we are scrutinizing grant-in-aid programs more carefully as to their actual benefit to the state's needs.

On the other hand, the state cannot fail to meet its responsibilities, he said. He implied that if the Legislature does not want more federal intervention, it must take over areas where the need arises to prevent such intervention.

One department which Hearnes created when he took office to meet rapid state growth and keep ahead of federal programs was that of Community Affairs, formerly known as Urban Affairs. The name was changed since many people misinterpreted the function of the department -- that is, to aid state-wide development of all communities.

The Department of Community Affairs, headed by Phil Maher, presently is administering programs of the Office of Economic Opportunity and is laying the groundwork for statewide developmental planning.

A bill in this special session would set up a state planning bureau which would assume some of the duties of the Commerce and Industrial Commission and other state divisions in providing a comprehensive plan for transportation, communications and industrial development throughout the state.

The immediate goals of the bill are to take advantage of federal water and sewer district legislation which requires such a state department to administer water and sewer program funds to small communities and rural areas.

As far as the long- range changes in the administrative divisions and initiation of a planning program, Hearnes said the state will have to "travel slowly." Once a state agency has been established, he said, the officials involved are reluctant to make changes which would relinquish some of their power and responsibilities.

Whether this planning bill will be passed or not by this special session, some planning program must be initiated in the future, Hearnes said.

He is confident that some of the provisions of the bill will be approved, but realizes that some legislation will not be passed for lack of time.

"You can't compare a special with a regular session of the Legislature," he said. "It is difficult for the members to adapt to the 60-day session."

As a result, many bills do not receive attention. After all, he said, the primary function of this session was approval of the budget for next year, and most of the other bills proposed were special interest measures requested by various state or local agencies.

Despite this fact, it is apparent that many measures will be approved, including billboard regulations , a medicare proposal supplementing the federal program and a bill providing for handling of stolen goods, recommended by the Jackson County prosecuting attorney.

SUPREME COURT OPENS HEAVY APRIL SESSION

The Missouri Supreme Court opened its April session Monday with a total of 82 civil cases and 30 criminal cases on the docket.

Chief Justice Clem F. Storckman said that 15 of these will be heard "en blanc," that is, by all seven justices, while the remaining cases will be heard by Divisions One and Two, with only three judges sitting in each division.

The Court is operating under a new system for this session, for in the past, four judges, including the Chief Justice, have been sitting with Division One, and three judges sat with Division Two.

There is no difference between the types of cases handled by the two divisions, Storckman said, but only three judges will sit in each division this time, allowing him more time to handle the administrative duties which become greater each year for the Chief Justice.

To meet the demands of a large docket, five judges have been called in from throughout the state to sit with each division and reduce the number of cases decided by each justice.

Under the 1945 Missouri Constitution, the Court was allowed to name judges from other courts, or retired Supreme Court judges, as special commissioners to hear Supreme Court cases.

Chief Justice Storckman will continue to hear some cases, but will only sit with one or two divisions when a case assigned to him is to be heard. By adjusting this work load, Storckman said the Chief Justice should have about 30 extra working days a year to handle administrative matters.

Coverage of Viet Nam War Costly in Lives and Money

NEW YORK AP - The Associated Press Board of Directors said in its annual report today that the cost of covering the war in Viet Nam has been heavy, both in casualties and financial expenses.

"During the year two Associated Press men were killed," the board said. "Four others have been wounded in Viet Nam. Due to escalation of the war, it was necessary to more than double the size of the staff there." The report, read at the annual AP meeting, said:

"The year was marked, too, by an increasing flood of news from Washington and greatly expanded government actions in all news fields.

The quick shifts in news emphasis and the need for experience in writing for an increasinglyly sophisticated public, call for new methods of handling news. The Associated Press now has special task forces available for major news developments."

The AP meeting, in addition to hearing the report, voted to fill seven vacancies on the 18-member board of directors and acted on the applications of 29 associate newspaper members to become regular members of the AP, whose news report reaches 900 million people around the world.

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey was the guest speaker at the AP luncheon after the business meeting.

Paul Miller, president of The Associated Press and president of Gannett newspapers, presided at the meeting and luncheon.

Wes Gallagher, general manager of The Associated Press, reported to the news executives on the activities of the cooperative news gathering association during the past year.

Other highlights of the meeting were personal reports in depth from Viet Nam and the Dominican Republic.

The directors, commenting on the new task forces, added: "One is a staff of experienced space and science writers assigned to the major space flights --there are more of these every year.

"A second task force, formed this past year consists of specialists in covering racial developments. These staff men, normally working in various bureaus around the country, converge on any area where their experience will be helpful.

"A third mobile emergency force is ready for assignment to enterprise projects connected with the spot news report.

"One of the year's major developments was the complete reorganization of the Wirephoto network to remove state barriers and to permit movement of the best quality pictures across state lines on a regional basis.

"In the first major change in Wirephoto routing since the network was established more than 30 years ago, there are now regional control bureaus in eight cities outside of New York-Chicago, Atlanta, Dallas, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Boston, Philadelphia, and Washington."

The directors said the progress of AP operations generally has been reflected by the greatest gains in newspaper membership since World War II. Twenty-eight daily newspapers in the United States came into Associated Press membership in 1965, and 19 more have applied for membership so far in 1966. There currently are 1,226 daily newspaper members in the United States.

Broadcast membership, the board said, is now at 2,828 and there are 4,515 subscribers to Associated Press service abroad in 103 countries and territories. The report added:

"The gains in the United States were more than matched in Latin America, which was the area of greatest growth in the world services in 1965.

"And since the first of the year has come another important development -- establishment of a local state-wire service in Puerto Rico. There are both English a Spanish - language circu' serving 28 newspapers ar broadcasters throughout P rto Rico, with the AP staf. ased in San Juan."

The report noted that the war in Viet Nam dominated the news of 1965 for the second straight year.

"The situation with respect to restrictions on coverage of the war in Viet Nam, which was deplored in our report a year ago, has eased," the board said. "As of today," correspondents and photographers find fewer difficulties placed in their way than earlier in the war.

"In Indonesia, American news agency offices were closed in January and correspondents expelled," the report said. "In late March they were permitted to return and we are now re-established there with Jeff Williams being sent from Tokyo to be correspondent at Jakarta."

The board said the fixed assets purchased in 1965 amounted to $1,547,560.34, all paid from funds of the corporation.

These technical advances were listed by the board:

"Automatic Wirephoto has proved to be an outstanding success. One of the first machines was displayed at our meeting here just a year ago. Since then more than 150 members in the United States, Canada and Europe have signed for this automatic delivery of glossy photographic prints, and practically all of the installations have been made.

"A spectacular new use of computers to provide baseball box scores has been instituted. The elaborate Associated Press play-by-play baseball services, reaching into every major league park in the United States, are coded and fed into AP computers, providing complete side-by-side box scores in tape within a minute or so after the end of the game. This gain of around 30 minutes on the average enables editors to make editions which they never could make before.

"Production will start soon o' 'AP Offsetter,' a machine to be connected directly to AP Teletypesetter circuits and produce in justified lines on printers copy for offset reproduction.

Friendship Garden

Mother has a green thumb
For flowers and people too.
She has a friendship garden
And one of flowering rue.

There is a time for everything
She says and seems to know
When to tender her affection
And when to let things go.

For the rhythm of all growing things
Like flowers and you and I
Is an alternate attention
And a silent standing by.

A friendship must grow slowly
Nor the flower plucked anon.
When it's time the bud will open
And the shyness will be gone.

In friendship garden mother works
As with her flowering rue.
She says it makes her fit to be
A friend and have one too.

And every flower that blossoms there
Begging Nature's pardon
Seems to have its human counterpart
In mother's friendship garden.

When I Was A Boy

B.F. "Pappy" Blanton

As compiled by Ralph Gregory, Curator of the Mark Twain Shrine, Florida, from the writings of the founder of the Appeal, B. F. "Pappy" Blanton, in 1919-20. A contemporary of Mark Twain, "Pappy" Blanton wrote of the times and customs that were so dear to Twain, and about which Twain wrote so many interesting and humorous anecdotes.

(Verbatim copy, with some questions and guesses as to missing words)

September 10, 1920

When I was a boy, nearly all of the wool hats, or large part of them, worn by men in Central Missouri, were made in Columbia by a man named Ashlock, who has been dead and forgotten for more than half a century and I have an idea that many people now living in Columbia do not know that at one time there was a hat factory in their town. But there was. Those Ashlock hats would last almost a lifetime. They were made entirely of wool, before shoddy was heard of in this country. They were sold in many parts of Missouri but the demand for something nicer and better looking finally drove them out of the trade. Or it may be that he could not compete with the eastern factories, any more than could the small town plow and wagon makers.

When I was a boy there were many thousands of Negro slaves in Missouri. These Negroes, as a general thing were well clothed and well fed and if they got sick the family physician was called in. The average owner of slaves rarely whipped them, but there were exceptions to this rule. I happen to remember two very brutal men who owned a lot of Negroes. One of these men belonged to one of the very best families in Boone county but when he got drunk he beat every Negro he could see when he got home and there is no doubt that he killed two of his Negroes. The other brutal master lived in Howard county and was supposed to be a very religious man. I am convinced that slavery was never a paying proposition in this state for by the manner in which farming was then done they never raised but little more than enough to clothe and feed themselves. I remember hearing a man say that they were "a mighty good shade in the summer and a mighty good fire in the winter."

When I was a boy we had very few conveniences and no luxuries, as I have before remarked, but lived just as happy and much more contented than people do today. Then we fought the flies with brushes made of peacock feather. Now we have screens and fly swatters. Nobody had ever seen or heard of a wrist watch. There were no white shoes or silk stockings. There were no pictures of girls or women almost naked in the newspapers as there are today. Nobody had appendicitis. Spraying orchards had never been thought of. Farmers went to town after their mail. There were no autos, or flying machines, no steel ships, telephones or telegraph. Then farmers burned their straw stacks. There were no anarchists, no I. W. W. organization to overthrow the government, no sewing machines, no safety razors and no dudes. County papers cost you $2 a year and were mighty common compared to the county paper of today. But there was not as much crime in the entire state in a year as is committed in any one of our larger cities in a month.

When I was a boy most all of the wagons, buggies and plows all over this part of the state were made by mechanics in the small towns, (they were all small towns then). Every town had its wagon shop where real, honest - to - goodness wagons were made, and in these same towns many plows were made. When the great eastern factories with their machine equipped plants began to ship in wagons and plows, they drove the small mechanic out of business as hand labor could not compete with machine made articles, so the industry died. It may interest some of my readers to know that 60 years ago, there was made in the village of Middle Grove, this county, hundreds of plows that were sold all over Monroe, Randolph, Boone, and Howard counties, and they were good plows too. I know, for I have plowed many a day with one of them.

'Fidler' Hit in West

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD AP -- Harold Prince paced the floor of his Beverly Hills Hotel bungalow and sputed ideas, as a hard-driving, highly successful Broadway producer should.

Prince was here to launch the road company of his "Fiddler on the Roof," which began a sold-out seven weeks at the Music Center after a week in San Diego.

"We played in San Diego to audiences of gentiles, and they loved it," he remarked. The musical concerns village life of Russian Jews. "Too bad we can only play seven weeks here. It could go on for seven months.

"The Shuberts swear that 'Fiddler' can go on at least seven years in New York. Imagine! The show has all the aspects of a classic, and that's something new for me. Even with 'West Side Story' we didn't sell out for the first few weeks, and there was no question of whether it would go at all.

"They're after me now to put together another 'Fiddler' company to take care of the cities that this one can't make. I'm resisting. It's not easy show to put together. But I'll probably give in.

"They said it was Zero Mostel's show and anybody would be crazy to follow him. But Luther Adler did, and he succeeded.

Now Herschel Bernardi is playing it in New York, and he's fine. It's not any one star's show. It's a classic."

Prince, who produced "Damn Yankees," "Pajama Game" and "Fiorello" among others, retains his boyish enthusiasm for the theater. That seems to be what it takes, since you can't succeed in the Broadway rat-race without really trying.

The trade knows that Prince tried hard with "It's a Bird. . . It's a Plane . . . It's Superman," which opened recently to what is generally called mixed reviews. Despite the yawns of some critics, Prince says the show is a solid hit.

Other Prince ideas:

A musical called "Cabaret" for next season, based on Christopher Isherwood's "I am a Camera" stories of 1930 Berlin.

A movie, "The Cook," all about eating, which Prince himself would direct.

"Old Kinderhook"

The term "O.K." is said by authorities to come from the initials for "Old Kinderhook," a nickname for Martin Van Buren taken from the name of the New York village where he was born. It was used as a political rallying cry when he ran for the presidency in 1840, according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

DICK VAUGHAN

ARTICLE #8

One of my earliest memories is of Saturday afternoon movies. I would make a special effort to see the name of the movie advertised on the Marquee', or find it listed in the STANDARD, although I knew exactly what was playing from the previews of the previous week.

All my gang had their favorite "cowboys" and used to assume their identities during our weekly games, so that it was not at all unusual to have Gene Autry shooting at Roy Rogers, with Hopalong Casidy and the Durango Kid choosing sides. My favorite was Johnny Mack Brown, because I liked to hear him say "Shayriff" for Sheriff. Also, he would never mess around singing mushy love songs like Roy Rogers or Gene Autry. He was all shooting and fighting and "Shariffing" through the whole show. Of course, a Roy Rogers song gave me the opportunity to run out to the lobby for a drink of water to wash away the salt from the popcorn. I would always make sure Mr. Decker saw me coming from inside the movie though, so I wouldn't have to buy another ticket.

Sikeston is probably the only place in the world where you don't get half of your ticket back. When I first left home, I used to exasperate the ticket takers by walking off and leaving him twisting a ticket in mid-air, rather than holding half and letting him tear it off. Now, when I come home, it is just the reverse. Mr. Decker, (the same one who used to watch me drink water), and I both stand for a second holding onto the same ticket until I realize that I am back home again.

Now all this rambling through the past may seem to be out of place in an article about Viet Nam, but I had occasion to recall these incidents out of my childhood recently, when I found out that we were going to have a movie.

For more than fifty days now, the troops of this company have put in 14 hours days, 7 days a week. This is not particularly unusual over here, and actually, the morale has remained very high. It is obvious that the work has to be done, and the results can be clearly seen. Never-the-less, it becomes accumulative, and you need relaxation more than you think. Therefore, we decided to try and secure a projector, so that we could get on distribution for the 16mm films that are floating around Viet Nam. Just securing the projector was in itself quite an accomplishment! But I would rather not divulge exactly how it was done at this time.

Once we had the projector, we were a few days getting the film, but the very fact that we had a projector was like money in the bank. Men would come from the flight-line, soaking wet with sweat from working on the aircraft, and walk by the projector in anticipation of the coming movies.

Then at last, we got a film. We didn't receive it in time to check it out before the performance though, and it was almost totally ruined. All of the sprocket guides on the film were stripped, and it wouldn't feed through the projector. The disappointment was acute, but the men comforted themselves with the knowledge that within a few days they would have another film.

Then the chance came again. The film was checked and was O.K. and the men gathered for the movie. Disaster struck again! The shaft on the take-up pulley snapped, and the projector wouldn't work.

The next day, we tried to equate the intricacies of helicopter maintenance, the projector maintenance, and finally a Jerry rigged contraption made the machine operate again.

Night came and we prepared once again to view the film. The men congregated around the back of a parts trailer where a sheet had been tacked up, and we were ready to begin! Suddenly, BRAACK, WHUMP! Incoming mortar fire! Even though the rounds were aimed for the flight line and the ships parked there, and not for us, we still had to run to the sandbag barricades, and must await the all-clear. By the time it was sounded, it was too late to show the movie. We had had the projector now for six days, and still no movie.

Finally night fell again, and once again we gathered to watch that movie. Charlie's mortars had been silenced, the film was good, and the projector worked. Along the perimenter, we could see tracers arching through the sky. We could hear in the distance the steady whump, whump, of artillery, and overhead, the sonic boom of 8 inch shells going through sound barrier, as they sped to distant targets. But on the screen was our movie!

What was the name of it? COMBAT!!!

matter of fact

Only about one-third of the world's population has an adequate food supply. In underdeveloped areas the deficiencies, such as undernutrition, protein malnutrition, anemia and beriberi, are predominant. But in regions in which food supplies are abundant and economic levels high, overnutrition, such as obesity, is the problem.

ANN LANDERS

Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: Why should the color of a woman's hair be so important to a husband that he would walk out of the house and not talk to her for two days?

I am 43 and look it. My husband is a youthful 44. My hairdresser suggested that I lighten my hair a few shades -- just enough to tone the gray down and give the appearance of being blonde. I don't mean a brassy blond -- I mean a nice, soft, honey color.

I was thrilled when I left the beauty shop. Everyone in the place raved. I felt 15 years younger. When my teen-agers came home they told me right off that they didn't like it. Teen-agers never like the way their mother looks so I discounted their remarks. But when my husband saw me he went through the roof. He said I looked like a streetwalker and added a few other comments.

I like my hair this way but I'm wondering if it's worth all this fighting. My husband insists he'll never get used to it and that I should switch back to natural. What would YOU do, Ann Landers? -- MINORITY OF ONE.

Dear Min: I'd rather switch than fight.

Dear Ann Landers: I hope you will publish this letter for the benefit of the 15-year-old girl who was caught sneaking her mother's car. She asked you to intervene in her behalf and you refused.

We, too, had a 15-year-old daughter who couldn't wait until she was given permission to drive. She had had some classroom instruction and it was only a matter of weeks before she would have been granted the permission that she so eagerly desired. But she just couldn't wait. She borrowed a car from a girl friend and nobody knows for sure exactly what happened.

When the police called us they could only say our darling daughter had smashed into a concrete bridge, the car had turned over in a ditch, and she was drowned in less than three feet of water.

What a horrible price our little girl paid for her mistake. The teen-ager who wrote to you should take her punishment and thank God she got off so lucky. -- MRS. M. J.

Dear Mrs. M.J.: Thanks for a letter which I'm sure was extremely difficult to write. But it was worth the effort, mother, take my word for it. Millions of teen-agers read this column and (hopefully) learn from it. You gave every high school student who ever "borrowed" his parents' car something to think about.

Dear Ann Landers: Due to illness I am just now getting around to acknowledging the cards we received at Christmas time. I have a whole stack of cards I can't acknowledge because I don't know who sent them.

The signatures read, "Jim and Alice," "Betty and Bill", and "Lois and Dick." We know several couples who have these names. The envelopes have been thrown away so there is no city to clue me.

This may not be a timely letter but it would surely be a national service if you'd remind people to put their last names on their Christmas cards and not assume that they are the only Ron and Beth in the whole world. ----TIRED

Dear Tired: A good letter is ALWAYS timely. Thanks for writing.

Liquor can ruin your mind, your body and your life. To learn the booby traps of teenage drinking, write for Ann Landers' booklet, "Teen-age Drinking," enclosing with your request 20¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

The Facts About T.V.A.

THE army engineers estimated that possible damages from floods on the Tennessee River could not exceed $2.25 million in any one year, yet the annual interest charges on the $153 million charged off by TVA to flood control up to 1947 amount to about $3.5 million per year. So, yearly interest costs the taxpayers at least fifty percent more a year than the maximum of flood damage would have cost.

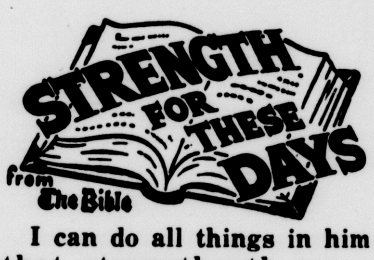
Dr. Kershner

According to the Chicago Tribune, TVA's locks and canals on the Tennessee River to make possible the carrying of freight, cost $158 million up to 1958. If all of this freight had been shipped by rail and paid for by the federal government, the cost to the taxpayers would have been about one-third of the amount TVA spent to promote navigation on the Tennessee River.

TVA was sold to the American people as a means of promoting navigation and irrigation, and for flood control purposes. It was supposed to generate hydro-electric power as a by-product. Generating electricity in steam plants has long been its major drive, and now it is considering the use of nuclear power for that purpose. This shows the fraudulent nature of the original contention that the development of hydro-electric power was only a by-product of the TVA plan for flood control and the promoting of navigation and irrigation.

During the past fourteen years, our exports of manufactured goods have declined from a little more than 26% of the total exports of all countries to 20%. German exports, during the same period of time, have increased from about 8% of the total of all manufactured goods to 20%, and are just equal to that of the United States.

This is a remarkable record for a country only one-quarter the size of ours, and it shows what can be accomplished when the people of a country are willing to work hard and refrain from foot-dragging and feather-bedding practices. Germany has remained competitive and her goods sell throughout the world, while we have indulged in wage-push inflation to the point where we have lost a large part of our export markets. Concurrently, we have lost a large part of our domestic markets because foreign competitors are able to sell goods in our own country, over and above transportation costs and tariffs, at less than we can make and sell the same goods. To get our share of the world's trade, both at home and abroad, we must remain competitive. If our wage scales make that impossible, we are living in a fool's paradise.



I can do all things in him that strengthenth me.—(Phil 4:13)

We have time for everything we need to do today. When we take such a stand at the beginning of a day it sets the tone of the day and puts us in tune with the spirit of successful accomplishment. We have time for all that needs to be done—the energy and strength we need, the wisdom and the power of Spirit at our command.

Humphrey Sees Need For Double Victory

NEW YORK AP -- Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey said today peace in Asia depends on victory against "poverty, disease and despair" as well as against "the classic power tactics of communism" in Viet Nam.

"We must not lose the peace in either struggle," the vice president said in a speech prepared for the annual meeting of The Associated Press.

"That is why we have committed once more -- as we have had to do before -- men, money, and resources to help the nations of Asia help themselves toward security and independence," Humphrey added.

Cautioning that "it won't be easy, it will be frustrating and at times heartbreaking," Humphrey sazd:

"We must stay and see it through. And the free nations of the world need to know that we have the vision and the endurance to do so.

"Those who threaten their neighbors in Asia should know it too. They should know that we will resist their aggression."

Humphrey, who returned two months ago from a nine-nation Asian tour, added, "They should also know that we bear no consumptive hate against their people, that we have no design on their sovereignty."

"We only look toward the day when all nations may choose to live in harmony with their neighbors -- when they may turn together their energies to building a better life for their peoples," he said. "For this is after all our second great task before us: the desperate need to narrow the widening gap between the rich and poor nations of the world."

Humphrey said that it is not possible to preserve lasting peace if glaring economic and social inequality among the peoples of the world exist.

Tying the hopes for peace to helping "the disinherited and left-out of this world," the vice president said:

"Today there are families spending their last day on earth because they haven't the strength or health to keep going.

"But those who remain --and you can be sure of this --those who remain will take to the streets . . . they will turn to any master . . . they will tear the fabric of peace to shreds, unless they have some reason to believe there is hope for life and hope for justice.

Humphrey then tied this idea to President Johnson's foreign aid request now before Congress and said, "We hear the same doubts and complaints today that we heard 20 years ago."

"If someone has a substitute for foreign aid, I'd like to hear about it," he said. "The investment we make in foreign aid -- in preventive medicine, if you will -- is certainly less than that necessary to treat the sumptoms of massive economic crisis and disorder and, yes, of war."

But Humphrey said leadership in the world requires "far more than a large stock of gunboats and a hard fist at the conference table" or the ability to go it alone, "although we must not be afraid to do so when necessary."

"Leadership today requires understanding of the problems we face -- of the resources at hand -- and of the objectives we seek," Humphrey said.

"It requires the ability, perhaps even more, to lead and inspire others -- to lead and inspire in a sense of common enterprise.

"For as strong and rich as we may become, our goal of a just and peaceful world will never be achieved by America alone," Humphrey said.

"It will be achieved only when the resources of strong and week, rich and poor alike are allocated in the most efficient manner possible, to challenges that are far too great for any one nation or group of nations to overcome."

Clay Pigeon "Trap"

The device used in propelling clay pigeons got the name of "trap" from the fact that the original trapshooters placed live birds in a series of traps. On signal, the operator of the traps pulled a cord, liberating the birds as targets for the shooters.

To the Editor
The Sikeston Standard
Sikeston, Missouri

Dear Sir:

The elected Authorities in Washington piously declaim that the United States is a nation of 'law' while cowardly submitting to rule by bureaucratic 'guidelines'. When will Congress rouse itself to control and regulate the agencies it has spawned??

The HEW guidelines have determined that all schools, hospitals and other facilities must have racial balance of white and colored to be eligible for the Federal funds approved for them by Congress. This follows neither the letter or the intent of the law and the Congress and the President know it.

What possible excuse can Congress have for abdicating its authority and allowing dictatorial rule by 'guidelines'??

Congressman George Grider has stated that it was not the intention of Congress to involuntarily force integration and Vice President Humphrey, when urging the Senate to vote for passage of the Civil-Rights law, stated:

"The bill does not attempt to integrate the schools, but it does attempt to eliminate segregation in the school systems. The fact that there is racial imbalance present is not something which is unconstitutional".

The U.S. Office of Health Education and Welfare is directly violating principles of the 1964 Civil-Rights law and of court decisions that hold that no government action can be taken to obtain racial balance in schools and hospitals.

Bureaucratic guidelines could possibly be helpful; but tied to illegal penalties, are obnoxious and have the stink of dictatorship.

Yours truly

To the Editor and the Fair-minded Citizens of Sikeston:

We, of the Scott Central R-5 school district, wish to appeal to the voters of Sikeston to help us keep our school for our children. We have nothing against Sikeston, but we are proud of our school just as all people should be of theirs. Many of us shop in your stores, bank in your banks, and attend your churches.

We wish you to know that we feel we have been treated very badly by the majority of our own Board of Education. Without our knowledge, they approached the Sikeston Board of Education, telling them that we wished to consolidate with Sikeston. They then went to the Scott County School board and told them that this was the wish of our district. This plan was sent to the State Board saying we wanted to consolidate with the Sikeston system. The state board approved the plan, and the election date was set for May 3. All of this was done without holding one meeting with the parents of our district. The County Board says these meetings were supposed to have been held. They also said we had been represented by the president of our Board of Education and by our school superintendent. Now I ask you: CAN ONE BE REPRESENTED ON A MATTER OF WHICH THEY KNOW NOTHING? We feel that we should have been allowed to vote for or against annexation, then if the majority voted in favor for it, then Sikeston could vote whether or not they want us. This way, we have had no choice in the matter, and will not have any unless you people of Sikeston help us. Therefore, we are pleading with you: VOTE "NO" ON MAY 3 AND HELP US TO KEEP OUR SCHOOL.

Several children, to come to Sikeston, would have to ride 20 miles or more and much of this over gravel roads. During the winter, the roads sometimes become hazardous. If the bus could not run, and Sikeston should continue to have school, then our pupils would have to miss school.

Several of our children, especially those from larger families, feel that they cannot dress as well as many of the children in Sikeston, will be unable to attend school activities due to being so far away, cannot be in the band since practice is so early in the morning, and many cannot pay the entry fee of $22 and $26. Therefore, if we do consolidate, about 50 pupils will drop out of school.

We feel that a pupil gets out of school just what he puts into it. We have pupils graduating from different colleges with high honors, including Columbia University and Rolla School of Mines. These people must have received a good foundation in our school.

In a 3 page article given out from door and handed out at your P.T.A., the main concern seemed to be what annexation would do for Sikeston financially. We help Sikeston financially already, by bringing them our business. If you will show your appreciation for our business by voting "NO" on May 3, we hope to continue doing business with you.

Matthews PTA Has Officers Installation

The Matthews elementary school P.T.A. held its final meeting of the school year Tuesday. The meeting was called to order by President Launius. Invocation was given by Rev. Blackard.

The secretary's report was given by Mrs. Jean Jewell. Room count was taken with Mrs. Solomon's sixth grade winning first place and Mrs. Wilson's sixth grade winning second.

Principal Mays announced that first grade pre-enrollment will be Friday, May 13. Move-up day for sixth graders will be May 12. Boy and girl week begins May 8. Open house will be May 17 and the last day of school is May 27.

Chief of Police Arthur Bruce gave the awards to the school safety patrol.

Following the installation of next year's officers by Clem Beal, he spoke on the reorganization proposal. This proposal will be voted on May 3.

After the meeting was adjourned, refreshments were served.

American Legion Auxiliary Meets With Mrs. York

Henry Meldrum Unit #114, American Legion Auxiliary, met Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Bill York, with president Mrs. Fred Tope, Jr., presiding.

The secretary's and treasurer's reports were accepted as read.

A letter from the Veterans Hospital, Poplar Bluff, was read in which they thanked the Unit for the numerous paper-backed books sent for use of the patients. The president also announced several aprons had been sent the hospital for the men to give for Mother's Day, May 8. She had another box of aprons to send for the same use. Twenty-five "Lap Robes" were sent the hospital recently too, Mrs. Tanner Dye reported.

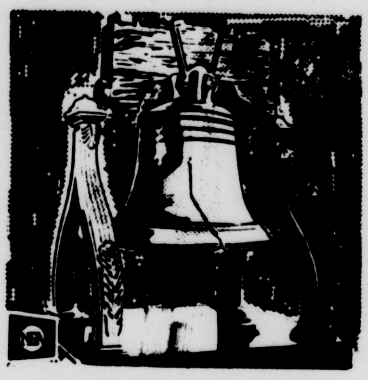
A note of thanks from the Business and Professional Women's Club was read for the Unit's participation in the Woman of the Year Project. The president reported she had received a request from a service man in Viet Nam for his local newspaper. Since he was from Lilbourn, she contacted the newspaper there and Bill Tope. A Sunday school class will send the Lilbourn newspaper to the service man.

Discussion was held concerning the project of the 14th District President of the American Legion Auxiliary which is the purchase of a record player for Talking Books for patients who for physical or visual reasons can not read at the Veterans Hospital. The unit voted to contribute $25 toward the project. Several years ago the local auxiliary unit purchased this same type of record player for the Veterans Hospital, but it needs replacing.

Mrs. Tanner Dye reported the women are still quilting each Wednesday at the American Lwgion Hall. However, they can always use more workers.

Girls State chairman reported the 10 applications for 10 girls to attend the 25th session of Girls State in June had been accepted. The girls now have their applications and are to return them to the chairman by May 5. A series of meetings will be held prior to the girls leaving for Columbia.

There being no further business the meeting was adjourned to a social hour with the hostess serving coffee, punch and cookies.



In 1775, the population of Philadelphia was 40,000. By that time Philadelphia was the largest city in the colonies by approximately 15,000 persons and in size was probably ranked second only to London among the cities of the British empire. It had tripled in size since 1740.

How to Display The U.S. Flag

Senators and Governors Endorse Flag-flying Efforts of U. S. Newspapers

Hiram L. Fong, U. S. Senator from Hawaii:

The American flag is the national symbol of our independence and unity. We should proudly fly it on all appropriate occasions, especially on our national holidays.

I congratulate The Daily Sikeston Standard for its patriotic public service in distributing American flags at cost to homeowners as a means of encouraging wider display of the flag on our national holidays.

John Tower, U. S. Senator from Texas:

With newspaper headlines depicting the crucial state of international affairs, every American is aware of the need for showing the world our nation is dedicated to its heritage of freedom. I would hope that every home can fly our flag on national holidays and I congratulate The Daily Sikeston Standard for its Patriotic public service in furthering this aim."

Wallace F. Bennett, U. S. Senator from Utah:

"I have long felt that the flying of the flag on national holidays is the least citizens can do to help remind themselves and others of our heritage and our good fortune to be living in the 'land of the free'... I congratulate The Daily Sikeston Standard for the public service in furthering this aim."

Thomas J. Dodd, U. S. Senator from Connecticut:

"With newspaper hearings depicting the difficult state of international affairs, every American is aware of the need for a united front to show the world our nation is dedicated to its heritage of freedom. I believe every home should fly our flag on national holidays, and I congratulate The Daily Sikeston Standard for its patriotic public service in furthering this aim."

Warren C. Magnuson, U. S. Senator from Washington:

"We cannot have too many American flags flying along our residential avenues on national holidays to remind ourselves as well as the world what it actually means to live in America and share its heritage. I congratulate The Daily Sikeston Standard for taking part in this effort."

In addition to the above excerpt from a letter from Senator Magnuson, the senator grants permission to reprint the general statement attributed to Senators Dodd and Tower, reprinted above.

QUICK QUIZ

Q—Why does "true blue" mean dependable or faithful?

A—"True blue" is said to go back to a superior quality blue dye manufactured in the Middle Ages in Coventry, England. Unlike other blue dyes, this one did not fade or run, so housewives began calling it the "true blue" dye.

MR. AND MRS. Thomas H. Parker, Parma, were handed a check for $6,100 for their new senior citizen home, Monday by L. V. Bryant of the Farmers Home Administration in New Madrid. From left are R. T. Bartlett, in charge of the FHA office, Bryant, and Mr. and Mrs. Parker.

THE FIRST Farmers Home administration senior citizen home in New Madrid was built for Mrs. Ella Henry and her daughter, Mrs. Mildred Dillard, Lilbourn, who occupied it in September of 1964. The two-bedroom house cost them $5,100. Mrs. Henry and her daughter stand on the front porch.

Parma Couple to Have First New Home

By LEO SCHADE

PARMA--Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Parker, 16-year residents of Parma and farmers for 50 years, will have the first new home of a lifetime.

The home will be the 100th such structure built in New Madrid county, under the senior citizens program since September, 1964, by the Farmers Home Administration.

Parker is 74 and his wife 63. They have reared 11 children, seven sons and four daughters.

"We felt that our children should have a good education, and all who sought a college education, received one," the father said.

Four are school teachers, one an engineer, and another has a doctor's degree in physics, teaching at Bowling Green, Ky., college. The youngest son is a junior in college. The couple has 61 grandchildren.

They farmed in Alabama and Arkansas before moving to Missouri. Parker retired nine years ago.

The new Parker home will have brick trimming in the front, which causes an increase in the loan price for the two-bedroom home from a $5,800 loan to $6,100.

The total price includes all closing costs, lot, material and labor. The debt will be paid off over 33 years at around $30 per month.

Homes can be constructed for senior citizens for one, two or three bedrooms, varying in cost from $5,100 to $5,800.

Homes previously built under the program in the county have cost $530,000 in material and labor, $50,000 for lots, and $10,000 for closing loans, which includes title opinions, abstracting and recording.

On the date of the 100th loan made to the Parkers, a letter was received by R. T. "Dick" Bartlett, in charge of the FHA office in the county from Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Wakefield, Parma:

"We have now lived in our new home for one year. This is the first new home we have had in 45 years of marriage. We reared eight children, and there never was enough money for us to buy a home. We cordially invite anyone to visit our new home, and we are doing our best to make it as attractive as possible."

CATV For City Debated

Conflicting claims were made and debated at a public hearing held last night by the city council on cable television.

Five men, representing as many as five CATV companies, the names of some of which were not disclosed, began the meeting with ten minute speeches.

Weber Gilmore, Sikeston attorney, told the council that his corporation, consisting of two Sikeston men and one man from out of the city, would take either a lease or a franchise in serving the city with cable television.

He said he thought that his corporation could better serve the community with a lease with the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, which could make use microwave facilities and existing lines.

He said that his company would not be in the repair service or antenna business.

Gilmore said that he thought if Sikeston desired CATV, the people were entitled to it.

He said that his corporation could bring in 12 channels.

Walter Haymert, Chicago, Ill., told the council that his company has an arrangement with Malden, is operating in Warrensburg and has a pole agreement with Southwestern Bell.

He said his company would bring in 12 channels.

Robert Jernigan, Hattisburg, Miss., said that he represented Earl Jarvis and Charles Conn.

He said they have systems in operation at Caruthersville and Paragould, Ark., in this region.

He told the council that CATV was not pay television and that his company would not service or sell television sets in order not to interfere with local businesses.

"It is a service needed by the people," Jernigan said.

His company would offer 10 channels.

Tom Allen said that he came for information for WKER of New York City. The council said that all would be notified within 30 days of the council's decision.

Jack Neins of KFVS Television in Cape Girardeau told of hazards of CATV.

He said with the present three television channels available here advertising has a value and that CATV would result in a fragmentation of viewers and lowering of advertising values.

Neins said that people of this region would be exposed to advertising from St. Louis and Memphis and that would tend to draw business away from local businesses.

He asked that the council examine all facts before deciding to bring CATV into the city.

Highway Beautification Problems Face House

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Highway beautification problems faced the Missouri House today.

A mangled billboard control bill was approved by a committee last week. It includes a provision for billboard spot zoning in rural areas.

Sponsors of the original version said that would nullify Missouri's chances to get $10 million in federal highway aid.

Monday the House advanced a $4.4 million catchall appropriation bill, the last money bill of the session.

A House-Senate conference committee already is at work on the other major bills in the $1 million-plus budget.

Sent to the Senate was a measure to provide state aid for part time students in public schools. Only full time students are counted now for state aid purposes.

Meanwhile Sen. William B. Waters, D-Liberty, Senate majority leader, held out hope the special session could finish its work by next Wednesday, May 4, if no major problems develop.

It has been generally assumed the 60-day special session would have to adjourn automatically at midnight, May 5.

But Waters told the Senate the actual deadline is Friday, May 6, which would be 60 days after the first day of the session. Gov. Warren E. Hearnes and House Speaker Thomas D. Graham, D-Cole County, agreed with this interpretation.

The governor said he has asked the attorney general to recheck the question just to make sure.

Auto Industry Asks Federal Safety Guides

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reversing its previous position, the automobile industry called today for "effective and forceful governmental machinery for setting vehicle safety standards without delay."

John S. Bugas, vice president of Ford Motor Co., told a House committee in behalf of the auto manufacturers:

"We favor a strong role for the federal government in setting vehicle safety performance standards."

The industry contended in earlier congressional testimony that it should be allowed to set car safety standards.

Thunderstorms Drench Flood Region of Texas

MARSHALL, Tex. AP -- Violent thunderstorms swept across drenched northeast Texas Monday, threatening to make flooding conditions more serious and adding to damages that already reach into the millions.

Tornadoes struck in south Texas and winds up to 75 miles per hour lashed the Corpus Christi area. At least five damaging twisters were reported in Texas Monday.

A packing plant was damaged and trees uprooted at Marshall and a second tornado in the Marshall area knocked down power lines and swept away the roof of a press box at a baseball park.

Another twister dipped to the ground north of Lake Qutman in the Mineola area. It caused heavy damage on the Keysey Ross farm.

Earlier, tornadoes struck the town of Kenedy and Runge in south Texas, leaving about 250 persons homeless and causing extensive damage to business buildings.

Red Cross officials said floodwaters had entered 50 homes in Longview and that about 50 families would probably be evacuated from the Roosevelt area of Dallas.

March collections totaled $129,633, a gain of about 60 per cent over March of last year.

Two Injured in Traffic Accidents

Two persons were injured in traffic accidents Monday.

Luther Sims, 40, Portageville, driving a 1964 Chevrolet, received a back injury one and one-half miles north of Portageville, on highway 61, last night at 10:30 p.m.

He lost control of his car, left the road, crossed it and turned over. He was treated by a Portageville physician.

Monday at 7 a.m., one mile south of Old Appleton, on highway 61, a 1965 White tractor-trailer driver, Zelma Ring, 48, West Memphis, received a leg injury in avoiding a collision.

A 1964 Ford, driven by Alvin Ludwig, Fruitland, attempted to pass a 1963 International dump truck, driven by William Clardy, 49, Burfordville.

In order to avoid crashing into another approaching car, the driver of the tractor-trailer left the road. Ludwig was given a summons for driving on the wrong side of the roadway, the state patrol reported.

Auto Industry Asks Federal Safety Guides

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reversing its previous position, the automobile industry called today for "effective and forceful governmental machinery for setting vehicle safety standards without delay."

John S. Bugas, vice president of Ford Motor Co., told a House committee in behalf of the auto manufacturers:

"We favor a strong role for the federal government in setting vehicle safety performance standards."

The industry contended in earlier congressional testimony that it should be allowed to set car safety standards.

Thunderstorms Drench Flood Region of Texas

MARSHALL, Tex. AP -- Violent thunderstorms swept across drenched northeast Texas Monday, threatening to make flooding conditions more serious and adding to damages that already reach into the millions.

Tornadoes struck in south Texas and winds up to 75 miles per hour lashed the Corpus Christi area. At least five damaging twisters were reported in Texas Monday.

A packing plant was damaged and trees uprooted at Marshall and a second tornado in the Marshall area knocked down power lines and swept away the roof of a press box at a baseball park.

Another twister dipped to the ground north of Lake Qutman in the Mineola area. It caused heavy damage on the Keysey Ross farm.

Earlier, tornadoes struck the town of Kenedy and Runge in south Texas, leaving about 250 persons homeless and causing extensive damage to business buildings.

Red Cross officials said floodwaters had entered 50 homes in Longview and that about 50 families would probably be evacuated from the Roosevelt area of Dallas.

PROTECTION OF PRIVACY

Congress is looking for new ways to protect the privacy of the American citizen without creating more problems than it solves. The right to privacy is now -- thanks to two Supreme Court decisions of the past year -- backed by constitutional guarantees. Nevertheless actual encroachment on the privacy of the individual appears to be less escapable than ever.

The trouble is that, in the modern world, a large measure of privacy is necessarily sacrificed and the loss can be mitigated only slightly by new laws. Our society requires extensive record-keeping on every individual. This is a cradle-to-grave process that begins with footprinting the newborn infant and ends only with the cause-of-death notation on the death certificate.

Over a life span, the dossier piles up: data on parents, medical records, school reports, intelligence and psychological test scores, job histories, credit facts, and so on. Some of this information the individual gives up himself, often through filling out the innumerable questionnaires that come his way. The remainder is obtained without his knowledge from sources not known to him.

The result is that more personal data on the average mid-20th century American be picked up by a routine check in a few days than scholars have been able to uncover about William Shakespeare -- a well-known actor in his day--after four centuries of digging. And most Americans are so inured to living in the fishbowl age, they willingly disclose information about themselves which their forebears would have considered nobody's business but their own.

But there are limits, even for the privacy-stripped American of today. A few weeks ago, for instance, the State Department put a stop to the practice of asking U.S. embassies to keep watch on American travelers "considered controversial." In a highly publicized case of a different sort, the president of General Motors Corp. apologized on March 22 before a Senate subcommittee for hiring a detective agency to pry into the private life of a subcommittee witness. Ralph Nadar had written a book and had given testimony critical of the industry for neglect of safety in automobile design.

No less than a half-dozen congressional subcommittees have investigated some phase of the privacy invasion question over the past year or so. Some of their revelations led to corrective action. The Post Office Department closed down the peepholes through which its agents spied on employees in locker rooms and toilets. Of more general application, the Department curtailed a long-standing practice of placing mail covers -- that is, recording information on the envelopes of letters delivered to particular addressees -- for use by an investigative agency.

Another area where limits on privacy invasion are being sought involves the use of hidden eavesdropping devices. Practically everyone is agreed that private snooping through wiretapping or the secret placement of miniature microphones and transmitters should have no place in American life. The big argument is under what conditions the police should be allowed to use them in the war on crime.

Telephone tapping was presumably outlawed by Congress in 1934, yet the practice still goes on. Evidence gained from wiretapping is permitted in some state (though no federal) courts. The Justice Department has long sought legislation to permit law enforcers to tap phones in crime investigations. However, Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach told a Senate Subcommittee on March 22 it would be better for Congress to ban all wiretapping outright than to leave the situation in its present ambiguous state.

The new miniature eavesdropping devices present an even more difficult control problem. The Federal Communications Commission adopted a rule, effective on April 8, forbidding private citizens to use radio devices to eavesdrop, but left it up to the states to decide whether their police should use them. In New York State, a court held on March 1 that court orders permitting police eavesdropping by such a device were invalid because contrary to the Fourth Amendment to the Constitution governing search and seizure.

Every newspaper publisher knows that he gives away thousands of dollars worth of advertising annually to causes which seem to serve the whole community.

Contributions of space go to every thing from Brownie cookie sales to farm development programs. Much of the publicity borders on closely to what should be paid advertising. Some of the borderline publicity is received without thanks.

A recent instance involving a giant lumber corporation and a small country newspaper is a good example.

For years the newspaper had been conducting a running campaign to prevent the malicious setting of forest fires. The campaign primarily served the lumber company which owned virtually all of the timber in the vicinity. However, the lumber company refused to do occasional institutional advertising in the newspaper.

The newspaper finally concluded that it was contributing beyond its obligations to the public welfare and discontinued its efforts to protect the forest lands of one company.

After several months an old pattern of forest burning was resumed. Because of spite, ignorance, or pure malicious amusement, the peoples of the community began to start fires which cost the lumber company hundreds of thousands of dollars within a few weeks.

The lumber company found it necessary to start advertising on a much larger scale than ever proposed by the newspaper. And it was necessarily local newspaper advertising since the small newspaper was the only publication read and respected by the rural community.

The advertising worked. It isn't a pretty story; but it is true.

RIGHT TO WORK GETS STRONG SUPPORT FROM COLLEGE STUDENTS

An in-depth exploration of thinking and attitudes of American college students shows that an overwhelming percentage (72 1/2%) favor enactment and enforcement of state Right to Work laws. The following "bellwether" colleges, which together provide a cross-section of America's 2,000,000 college students, lent their student-bodies to the study:

Sarah Lawrence College, Brooksville, N. Y.; Williams College, Williamstown, Mass.; Yale University, New Haven, Conn; Marquette University, Milwaukee, Wisc.; Boston University; Indiana University, Bloomington, Ind.; University of South Carolina, Columbia, S.C.; Reed College, Portland, Ore.; Davidson College, Davidson, N.C.; Brandeis University, Waltham, Mass.; Stanford University, Palo Alto, Calif. Two are tax-supported, the others are private.

The project was conducted, with highly scientific methods, by Educational Reviewer, Inc. In reporting the results, the project director said:

"One of the few areas of general agreement in the poll has to do with right-to-work laws. Every school in the poll except Sarah Lawrence has a substantial majority either definitely in favor or somewhat in favor of such a law, and at no school does a plurality disapprove of the measure. In all, five-eighths of the students polled showed partiality toward right-to-work, with little more than a sixth showing opposition."

KNOW WHAT YOU'RE TALKING ABOUT -- READ ...

"The Deepest Days" by Robert Stenuit. The science of oceanography is advancing on a slowly awakening public like a cheetah on a fat impala. Today man scans the heavens because they are unreachable except in his imagination. Yet 20 minutes at 30 feet with an aqualung in any coastal cove and man forgets the stars in favor of the starfish. Robert Stenuit has helped to open a new world for man, "Innerspace," as romantic and mysterious as outer space. Today Stenuit is a record-holder, tomorrow he will be just another oceanographic explorer, and next Monday, a fondly-remembered pioneer. Such is the wave and it is largely due to men like Ed Link, the driving spirit of enthusiastic inventiveness behind this path-finding venture, to whom Stenuit devotes a glowing biographical chapter. The author then introduces himself as an underwater archaeologist learning survival in the sea. Link and Stenuit move quickly from spelunking through treasure diving to salvage operations and Mediterranean submarine archaeology. Stenuit's coolness and Link's drive make a rare combination and climaxes in a two-day stay with John Lindberg in a new house 400 feet underwater. Adventure, difficulties, failures and successes all add up to challenge. Oceanography has taken a step in the right direction. Stimulating, provocative reading for anybody.

Inattention Is A Major Cause Of Traffic Accidents

The Missouri Highway Patrol reports that inattention while driving is a major contributing cause of traffic accidents.

Last year, in accidents investigated by the Patrol, 3,581 mishaps were directly attributed to inattention.

Captain John A. Berglund, of the Patrol's Division of Safety, commented, "Motorists are subjected to many distractions when operating their vehicles. They are responsible for not permitting these to lead to inattention and neglect of the primary job of driving safely.

"It isn't necessary for a driver to keep his eyes glued to the road, excluding all else from sight and hearing. It is possible, however, to avoid certain acts that may lead to trouble."

Captain Berglund urged motorists to avoid the following acts when behind the wheel: (1) Daydreaming; (2) Looking at passengers while driving; (3) Looking out the rear view mirror for a long period of time; (4) Searching for something on the floor while in motion; (5) Checking maps for the next stop.

"Taking your mind off driving for any reason and for only a short period of time can lead to a traffic accident," declared the Captain. "A vehicle traveling only 30 miles per hour travels over 130 feet in three seconds. If a driver takes his eyes or mind off the road for only that short period of time, quite a bit can happen. At faster speeds, it is even more dangerous.

"Motorists must realize that driving is a full-time job," Captain Berglund concluded. "They must give their full attention to what is going on in traffic and do their best to avoid any act that may lead to inattention."

WHAT SEA POWER INVOLVES

It has long been said that "sea power means world power."

Historical precedent -- and certain current events as well-prove this. But there is certainly a need for better understanding of just what sea power involves.

The Portland, Oregon Journal recently touched on two aspects of maritime affairs which, it believes, are insufficiently realized; "One is that the nation which is the principal threat to peace, the Soviet Union, is making strenuous and remarkable successful efforts to become a world sea-power for the first time. The other is that with all the advances in air transportation and our investment in space research, our Navy and merchant Marine still are vital to America's safety and prosperity, and will remain so."

The merchant marine, in other words, is as much a part of sea power as the Navy itself. The Soviets recognize this -- in fact, they aren't only trying to become a world sea power, but hope to be THE world sea power in the foreseeable future. They are in the midst of a merchant marine building program of enormous scope. Their new ships are excellent in every respect. Even though much of the Soviet economy is lagging, there is no slowing down in this -- the order is full speed ahead.

Ships -- merchant ships, flying their countries' flags -- are prime cold war weapons. They are instruments with which world economic strength, influence, and prestige are built. U.S. merchant marine policy must always reflect that truth. And American shippers can be of the greatest help in this contest for control of the seas by specifying that their cargoes move on U.S. - flag vessels whenever possible.

H. L. Hunt Says

INFLATION AND GOVERNMENT

Suddenly everyone is talking about rising prices and wages. From a mere bugaboo of a so-called "radical right," they have abruptly emerged as a clear and present danger.

No one likes a general rise in prices and wages, moving upward more rapidly than real productivity. Everyone wants to prevent it in advance if possible and stop it when it is obviously underway.

There is little the individual, alone, can do about it. He has to use the money government provides. He has to pay the prices asked for goods, if he buys them at all, and there are some he must buy, food being the most obvious example.

There is a great deal that government could do to halt inflation, if the true cause of inflation were better understood and government officials were really more interested in the people's welfare than their own. Government could stop pumping more money and credit into the economy through the Federal Reserve system; since government by itself can produce no wealth at all, the effect of such money and credit is wholly inflationary. Government could also reduce its borrowing, which would mean reducing its spending.

But we rarely hear proposals for measures like these to halt inflation, and they never come from government. Instead, the newspapers are filled with talk of higher taxes and more controls, which would give government more money to take and more to spend. It is foolish to call such measures "anti-inflationary." More spending and buying by government has just the same inflationary effects as more spending and buying by private individuals.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- The automobile industry is confident it will do better in blocking government controls on accident safety before the House Commerce Committee than it did before the Senate. Before Sen. Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., and his Commerce Committee, it took a bad shellacking.

Reason for the optimism is more pro-industry congressmen on the House committee, especially Watler Rogers, Tex., Horace Kornegay, N.C., Democrats, with Glenn Cunningham, Neb., Arthur Younger, Calif., and Albert Watson, S.C., Republicans.

The motor moguls also consider Chairman Harley Staggers, D-W. Va., a bit flibberty-jibberty and figure they can bend him their way.

What the industry will plug for is at least to retain the Johnson administration bill, written under the supervision of Secretary of Commerce John T. Connor, formerly a General Motors director.

The Connor bill contains the amazing provision that the investigator's report of an accident cannot be used before the courts in a criminal or civil suit. Furthermore the investigator himself cannot be subpoenaed to appear in court.

Thus the information the public pays for cannot be used by the public.

The bill provides for federal investigative teams all over the United States to probe accidents on the spot, all paid for by the taxpayers. However, the information is not to be used in court, obviously because it might show the auto manufacturers to be at fault.

Thus if an accident occurred because of a stuck accelerator, the federal accident report could not be used in court. Today, some drivers are in jail serving manslaughter convictions because of car defects and because the reports of defects could not be used in court. This will not be remedied by the new safety bill proposed by the Johnson administration.

SUPPRESSING REPORTS

Furthermore, the Division of Accident Protection in the Health, Education, and Welfare Department has long followed a deliberate policy of suppressing accident reports paid for by the taxpayer.

When this charge was made in the Senate hearings by Ralph Nader, the young attorney who sparked the entire probe of auto safety, Phil Lee, newly appointed assistnat Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, was frank enough to tell Nader publicly that he was quite right.

In fact, Leon Goldstein, chief of Grants Research in the Division of Accident Prevention, has even refused to let his superior, Assistant Secretary Lee, see some of the accident reports.

Some of these reports cost as much as $900,000 -- all paid for by the taxpayer. Yet Goldstein refuses to make some of them public.

"I want to make sure these reports are not misinterpreted by misinformed people," Goldstein explains.

One important study, costing the taxpayer $170,000, was made by Public Service Research of Stamford, Conn., and is a treatise on the accident characteristics of the Chevy, Plymouth and Ford. While the report has been made public, the cars are identified only as "A, B, and C," so the reader has no way of knowing whether "A" refers to the Chevy, "B" to the Ford, "C" to Plymouth, or vice versa.

Another report, written by Prof. James Ryan of the University of Minnesota and costing $90,000, is on "crashworthy designs for automobiles." Dr. Ryan developed a hydraulic bumper which he tried out by crashing into a brick wall at a speed of 20 miles an hour.

Despite a weak heart, he survived. With any other bumper he would have been killed.

WHERE IS REUTHER?

After that, however, the industry treated him as a step-child. His funds were cut off. He was dropped from the University of Minnesota and investigated by the auto industry. His original report has not been released, though paid for by the taxpayers. Ryan, however, is no crackpot. He has too many patents in his name, including the flight recorder now used on all airplanes to record what happens in aviation accidents.

Rep. John Moss, D-Calif., is indignant over this supression of vital facts to which the public is entitled and plans to cross-examine industry officials.

One report gathering dust in the HEW's division of accident prevention was written by Goldstein himself when a professor at George Washington University, on the subject of "driver behavior." It cost $260,000. No one really knows what the taxpayer got for his money.

Amazing fact is that two potent organizations affected by the accident probe haven't been heard from. They are: Walter Reuther's United Auto Workers and the Casualty Insurance people.

For years the insurance companies have been harping on the subject of auto safety. Every holiday weekend, they have helped announce the gruesome total of auto fatalities. Yet no indication has come from the insurance companies that they would like to testify regarding government moves to insure auto safety. The insurance companies apparently want to stand on the side of industrial power, not public safety.

This column is supposed to report what goes on behind the scenes in Washington, so here is a report on what has been going on behind the scenes in the Sen. Tom Dodd investigation.

Early in our development of this story, Jack Anderson notified the FBI that we had certain important documents pertaining to the ethics of a key senator, and invited the FBI around to study and evaluate the documents.

Mr. Anderson, I might add, not having been around Washington as long as I, labors under the impression that the FBI is anxious to root out and suppress wrong-doing wherever it may be -- even in high places.

The FBI, therefore, with Mr. Anderson's cooperation photographed every scrap of evidence we had. When some of the photos didn't develop clearly, the FBI even came back and rephotographed.

Jack had also been working with half a dozen prospective witnesses, all former Dodd employees, to tell the FBI what they knew of Dodd's misconduct. These were young people who had been shocked at what was happening in Dodd's office and departed. They felt under moral obligation to report what was happening.

Mr. Anderson offered to produce these witnesses, no strings attached, for the FBI.

FBI CROSS-EXAMINES

The G-men called on the witnesses all right, but didn't ask a single question about Dodd, his conduct, whether he had diverted funds from testimonial dinners to his own pocket and whether he had acted on behalf of a foreign agent, Gen. Julius Klein.

Instead, the FBI cross-examined these young people about the alleged theft of Dodd's documents. They also heckled them about other stories Jack Anderson and I had written, including how we got the unpublished manuscript of the Cosa Nostra squealer, Joe Valachi. What this had to do with the Dodd case is hard to explain, but the FBI didn't try to explain it.

These witnesses are clean-cut young men and women, who believe senators are not above the law and that it should not be against the law to document corruption charges against a U.S. senator. They are not disgruntled employees who came running to us with information against their boss. We sought them out; it took weeks to persuade them that their first loyalty sould be to their country, not to Dodd.

However, the public can judge for itself these witnesses if they are ever given a chance to testify.

As fast as the FBI discovered the identity of the witnesses, they were bullied and badgered, hounded and harassed. One lost his job on a House committee; the news of his dismissal came from Dodd's office. Another, who decided it was his duty to testify against Dodd, felt it improper to remain in Dodd's office. Since submitting his resignation, he has been unable to find another job. Others have had their jobs threatened.

One woman, seven months pregnant, was grilled by agents for three hours. Another Senate employee, who simply had been gossiping about the case, hardly got back to his office before the G-men descended upon him and pumped him to find out what he knew.

Agents hauled some witnesses right into Dodd's office for cross-examination and behaved as if they were working for the Senator. Other witnesses were alternately soft-soaped and threatened with federal prosecution.

I have been around Washington a long time, but have never seen such an example of police state operation.

Such investigations, of course, do not happen by accident. They usually go beyond the attorney general, Mr. Katzenbach, an awfully nice guy, but a bit wishy-washy when it comes to standing up to the White House or the Senate Judiciary Committee of which Tom Dodd is a member.

Such investigations usually go right up to the President himself. Mr. Johnson has on his desk a direct private phone to J. Edgar Hoover. They are very old friends, dating back to the days when I used to visit in Lyndon's home when he was a gawky young congressman from Texas living just across the street from J. Edgar Hoover's well - appointed bachelor abode.

Lyndon is not only a friend of Hoover's but he is a friend of Dodd's. It takes a real friend to make the two trips he made to Connecticut to speak at two testimonial dinners which raised $100,000 for Tom's personal bank account.

After the 1961 testimonial, Dodd's political lieutenant, Ed Sullivan, wrote to him: "Charles McDonough (an insurance executive) drove Vice President Johnson back to the airport after dinner. On the way, he told Charlie under no condition would he miss your dinner. He said he considers you and Grace (Mrs. Dodd) amongst the best friends of he and Mrs. Johnson, and considers you on the Senate floor the best friend he has."

Lyndon did all right for Tom. He hoisted him to a choice position on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, ahead of other senators, a vantage point from which he was able to work more effectively for Gen. Julius Klein. And he almost picked Tom to run with him for vice president.

Such is part of the inside story of what goes on in Washington.

NEW YORK AP -- Do you wonder whether you are middle-aged?

Well, middle age is like success or life itself: It isn't a destination -- just part of the journey.

Nobody is born middle-aged; it is thrust upon us by time. If you keep your nose clean, wash behind your ears, and look both ways before crossing the street, sooner or later you will achieve middle age. It is one of the pallid laurels of successful living.

Some people, on reaching middle age, try to hide it, as though it were a shameful disease. Actually, of course, it isn't really a malady, although it can be catching.

In any case, it is foolish to try to camouflage the condition of middle age.

Undoubtedly, you are middle-aged if:

You'd rather grow tomatoes than roses, because you can only smell roses but you can eat tomatoes.

In a year you gulp more aspirin tablets than you do candy mints.

You suspect that anyone who chews gum in public is mentally deficient.

There is no doubt in your mind that the average teen-ager carries a switchblade knife and is a potential dope addict.

You dimly remember that the Lambeth Walk was a dance, but you shrug when anyone mentions the Frug. It isn't part of your vocabulary, and you don't want it to be.

Sitting on the bus going home you get angry because some younger fellow doesn't get up and give his seat to an old lady. You'd do it yourself -- if your feet didn't hurt you.

It annoys you if your wife buys a new piece of furniture. You'd rather have the old one reupholstered.

If you get a martini at lunch that isn't up to your standard, your secretary suffers for it the rest of the afternoon.

You hate to admit you're growing older, but you are miffed if your friends don't send you a card on your birthday.

What you don't give to the doctor, the dentist gets.

Trifles break down your morale. If you get a shirt back from the laundry with a button missing, that's just one more sign that the whole world's against you.

All the foods you like are bad for you, and all the foods you hate are good for you.

You are more comfortable in the comapny of a man whose prejudices you know than one whose cleverness you don't quite grasp.

After putting on one sock in the morning, you pause and sigh and take a deep breath before putting on the other sock.

Whatever anything costs, it isn't worth it -- and doesn't last as long as it used to.

You take life as it comes, realizing that no new mouth lotion is likely to improve your social position and no dandruff cure will win you promotion at the office.

The remainder is obtained without his knowledge from sources not known to him.

The result is that more personal data on the average mid-20th century American be picked up by a routine check in a few days than scholars have been able to uncover about William Shakespeare -- a well-known actor in his day -- after four centuries of digging. And most Americans are so inured to living in the fishbowl age, they willingly disclose information about themselves which their forebears would have considered nobody's business but their own.

But there are limits, even for the privacy-stripped American of today. A few weeks ago, for instance, the State Department put a stop to the practice of asking U.S. embassies to keep watch on American travelers "considered controversial." In a highly publicized case of a different sort, the president of General Motors Corp. apologized on March 22 before a Senate subcommittee for hiring a detective agency to pry into the private life of a subcommittee witness. Ralph Nadar had written a book and had given testimony critical of the industry for neglect of safety in automobile design.

No less than a half-dozen congressional subcommittees have investigated some phase of the privacy invasion question over the past year or so. Some of their revelations led to corrective action. The Post Office Department closed down the peepholes through which its agents spied on employees in locker rooms and toilets. Of more general application, the Department curtailed a long-standing practice of placing mail covers -- that is, recording information on the envelopes of letters delivered to particular addressees -- for use by an investigative agency.

Another area where limits on privacy invasion are being sought involves the use of hidden eavesdropping devices. Practically everyone is agreed that private snooping through wiretapping or the secret placement of miniature microphones and transmitters should have no place in American life. The big argument is under what conditions the police should be allowed to use them in the war on crime.

Telephone tapping was presumably outlawed by Congress in 1934, yet the practice still goes on. Evidence gained from wiretapping is permitted in some state (though no federal) courts. The Justice Department has long sought legislation to permit law enforcers to tap phones in crime investigations. However, Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach told a Senate Subcommittee on March 22 it would be better for Congress to ban all wiretapping outright than to leave the situation in its present ambiguous state.

The new miniature eavesdropping devices present an even more difficult control problem. The Federal Communications Commission adopted a rule, effective on April 8, forbidding private citizens to use radio devices to eavesdrop, but left it up to the states to decide whether their police should use them. In New York State, a court held on March 1 that court orders permitting police eavesdropping by such a device were invalid because contrary to the Fourth Amendment to the Constitution governing search and seizure.

Every newspaper publisher knows that he gives away thousands of dollars worth of advertising annually to causes which seem to serve the whole community.

Contributions of space go to every thing from Brownie cookie sales to farm development programs. Much of the publicity borders on closely to what should be paid advertising. Some of the borderline publicity is received without thanks.

A recent instance involving a giant lumber corporation and a small country newspaper is a good example.

For years the newspaper had been conducting a running campaign to prevent the malicious setting of forest fires. The campaign primarily served the lumber company which owned virtually all of the timber in the vicinity. However, the lumber company refused to do occasional institutional advertising in the newspaper.

The newspaper finally concluded that it was contributing beyond its obligations to the public welfare and discontinued its efforts to protect the forest lands of one company.

After several months an old pattern of forest burning was resumed. Because of spite, ignorance, or pure malicious amusement, the peoples of the community began to start fires which cost the lumber company hundreds of thousands of dollars within a few weeks.

The lumber company found it necessary to start advertising on a much larger scale than ever proposed by the newspaper. And it was necessarily local newspaper advertising since the small newspaper was the only publication read and respected by the rural community.

The advertising worked. It isn't a pretty story; but it is true.

RIGHT TO WORK GETS STRONG SUPPORT FROM COLLEGE STUDENTS

An in-depth exploration of thinking and attitudes of American college students shows that an overwhelming percentage (72 1/2%) favor enactment and enforcement of state Right to Work laws. The following "bellwether" colleges, which together provide a cross-section of America's 2,000,000 college students, lent their student-bodies to the study:

Sarah Lawrence College, Brooksville, N. Y.; Williams College, Williamstown, Mass.; Yale University, New Haven, Conn; Marquette University, Milwaukee, Wisc.; Boston University; Indiana University, Bloomington, Ind.; University of South Carolina, Columbia, S.C.; Reed College, Portland, Ore.; Davidson College, Davidson, N.C.; Brandeis University, Waltham, Mass.; Stanford University, Palo Alto, Calif. Two are tax-supported, the others are private.

The project was conducted, with highly scientific methods, by Educational Reviewer, Inc. In reporting the results, the project director said:

"One of the few areas of general agreement in the poll has to do with right-to-work laws. Every school in the poll except Sarah Lawrence has a substantial majority either definitely in favor or somewhat in favor of such a law, and at no school does a plurality disapprove of the measure. In all, five-eighths of the students polled showed partiality toward right-to-work, with little more than a sixth showing opposition."

KNOW WHAT YOU'RE TALKING ABOUT -- READ ...

"The Deepest Days" by Robert Stenuit. The science of oceanography is advancing on a slowly awakening public like a cheetah on a fat impala. Today man scans the heavens because they are unreachable except in his imagination. Yet 20 minutes at 30 feet with an aqualung in any coastal cove and man forgets the stars in favor of the starfish. Robert Stenuit has helped to open a new world for man, "Innerspace," as romantic and mysterious as outer space. Today Stenuit is a record-holder, tomorrow he will be just another oceanographic explorer, and next Monday, a fondly-remembered pioneer. Such is the wave and it is largely due to men like Ed Link, the driving spirit of enthusiastic inventiveness behind this path-finding venture, to whom Stenuit devotes a glowing biographical chapter. The author then introduces himself as an underwater archaeologist learning survival in the sea. Link and Stenuit move quickly from spelunking through treasure diving to salvage operations and Mediterranean submarine archaeology. Stenuit's coolness and Link's drive make a rare combination and climaxes in a two-day stay with John Lindberg in a new house 400 feet underwater. Adventure, difficulties, failures and successes all add up to challenge. Oceanography has taken a step in the right direction. Stimulating, provocative reading for anybody.

Inattention Is A Major Cause Of Traffic Accidents

The Missouri Highway Patrol reports that inattention while driving is a major contributing cause of traffic accidents.

Last year, in accidents investigated by the Patrol, 3,581 mishaps were directly attributed to inattention.

Captain John A. Berglund, of the Patrol's Division of Safety, commented, "Motorists are subjected to many distractions when operating their vehicles. They are responsible for not permitting these to lead to inattention and neglect of the primary job of driving safely.

"It isn't necessary for a driver to keep his eyes glued to the road, excluding all else from sight and hearing. It is possible, however, to avoid certain acts that may lead to trouble."

Captain Berglund urged motorists to avoid the following acts when behind the wheel: (1) Daydreaming; (2) Looking at passengers while driving; (3) Looking out the rear view mirror for a long period of time; (4) Searching for something on the floor while in motion; (5) Checking maps for the next stop.

"Taking your mind off driving for any reason and for only a short period of time can lead to a traffic accident," declared the Captain. "A vehicle traveling only 30 miles per hour travels over 130 feet in three seconds. If a driver takes his eyes or mind off the road for only that short period of time, quite a bit can happen. At faster speeds, it is even more dangerous.

"Motorists must realize that driving is a full-time job," Captain Berglund concluded. "They must give their full attention to what is going on in traffic and do their best to avoid any act that may lead to inattention."

WHAT SEA POWER INVOLVES

It has long been said that "sea power means world power."

Historical precedent -- and certain current events as well-prove this. But there is certainly a need for better understanding of just what sea power involves.

The Portland, Oregon Journal recently touched on two aspects of maritime affairs which, it believes, are insufficiently realized: "One is that the nation which is the principal threat to peace, the Soviet Union, is making strenuous and remarkable successful efforts to become a world sea-power for the first time. The other is that with all the advances in air transportation and our investment in space research, our Navy and merchant Marine still are vital to America's safety and prosperity, and will remain so."

The merchant marine, in other words, is as much a part of sea power as the Navy itself. The Soviets recognize this -- in fact, they aren't only trying to become a world sea power, but hope to be THE world sea power in the foreseeable future. They are in the midst of a merchant marine building program of enormous scope. Their new ships are excellent in every respect. Even though much of the Soviet economy is lagging, there is no slowing down in this -- the order is full speed ahead.

Ships -- merchant ships, flying their countries' flags -- are prime cold war weapons. They are instruments with which world economic strength, influence, and prestige are built. U.S. merchant marine policy must always reflect that truth. And American shippers can be of the greatest help in this contest for control of the seas by specifying that their cargoes move on U.S. - flag vessels whenever possible.

H. L. Hunt Says

INFLATION AND GOVERNMENT

Suddenly everyone is talking about rising prices and wages. From a mere bugaboo of a so-called "radical right," they have abruptly emerged as a clear and present danger.

No one likes a general rise in prices and wages, moving upward more rapidly than real productivity. Everyone wants to prevent it in advance if possible and stop it when it is obviously underway.

There is little the individual, alone, can do about it. He has to use the money government provides. He has to pay the prices asked for goods, if he buys them at all, and there are some he must buy, food being the most obvious example.

There is a great deal that government could do to halt inflation, if the true cause of inflation were better understood and government officials were really more interested in the people's welfare than their own. Government could stop pumping more money and credit into the economy through the Federal Reserve system; since government by itself can produce no wealth at all, the effect of such money and credit is wholly inflationary. Government could also reduce its borrowing, which would mean reducing its spending.

But we rarely hear proposals for measures like these to halt inflation, and they never come from government. Instead, the newspapers are filled with talk of higher taxes and more controls, which would give government more money to take and more to spend. It is foolish to call such measures "anti-inflationary." More spending and buying by government has just the same inflationary effects as more spending and buying by private individuals.

NEW YORK AP -- Do you wonder whether you are middle-aged?

Well, middle age is like success or life itself; It isn't a destination -- just part of the journey.

Nobody is born middle-aged; it is thrust upon us by time. If you keep your nose clean, wash behind your ears, and look both ways before crossing the street, sooner or later you will achieve middle age. It is one of the pallid laurels of successful living.

Some people, on reaching middle age, try to hide it, as though it were a shameful disease. Actually, of course, it isn't really a malady, although it can be catching.

In any case, it is foolish to try to camouflage the condition of middle age.

Undoubtedly, you are middle-aged if:

You'd rather grow tomatoes than roses, because you can only smell roses but you can eat tomatoes.

In a year you gulp more aspirin tablets than you do candy mints.

You suspect that anyone who chews gum in public is mentally deficient.

There is no doubt in your mind that the average teen-ager carries a switchblade knife and is a potential dope addict.

You dimly remember that the Lambeth Walk was a dance, but you shrug when anyone mentions the Frug. It isn't part of your vocabulary, and you don't want it to be.

Sitting on the bus going home you get angry because some younger fellow doesn't get up and give his seat to an old lady. You'd do it yourself -- if your feet didn't hurt you.

It annoys you if your wife buys a new piece of furniture. You'd rather have the old one reupholstered.

If you get a martini at lunch that isn't up to your standard, your secretary suffers for it the rest of the afternoon.

You hate to admit you're growing older, but you are miffed if your friends don't send you a card on your birthday.

What you don't give to the doctor, the dentist gets.

Trifles break down your morale. If you get a shirt back from the laundry with a button missing, that's just one more sign that the whole world's against you.

All the foods you like are bad for you, and all the foods you hate are good for you.

You are more comfortable in the comapny of a man whose prejudices you know than one whose cleverness you don't quite grasp.

After putting on one sock in the morning, you pause and sigh and take a deep breath before putting on the other sock.

Whatever anything costs, it isn't worth it -- and doesn't last as long as it used to.

You take life as it comes, realizing that no new mouth lotion is likely to improve your social position and no dandruff cure will win you promotion at the office.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- The automobile industry is confident it will do better in blocking government controls on accident safety before the House Commerce Committee than it did before the Senate. Before Sen. Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., and his Commerce Committee, it took a bad shellacking.

Reason for the optimism is more pro-industry congressmen on the House committee, especially Watler Rogers, Tex., Horace Kornegay, N.C., Democrats, with Glenn Cunningham, Neb., Arthur Younger, Calif., and Albert Watson, S.C., Republicans.

The motor moguls also consider Chairman Harley Staggers, D-W. Va., a bit flibberty-jibberty and figure they can bend him their way.

What the industry will plug for is at least to retain the Johnson administration bill, written under the supervision of Secretary of Commerce John T. Connor, formerly a General Motors director.

The Connor bill contains the amazing provision that the investigator's report of an accident cannot be used before the courts in a criminal or civil suit. Furthermore the investigator himself cannot be subpoenaed to appear in court.

Thus the information the public pays for cannot be used by the public.

The bill provides for federal investigative teams all over the United States to probe accidents on the spot, all paid for by the taxpayers. However, the information is not to be used in court, obviously because it might show the auto manufacturers to be at fault.

Thus if an accident occurred because of a stuck accelerator, the federal accident report could not be used in court. Today, some drivers are in jail serving manslaughter convictions because of car defects and because the reports of defects could not be used in court. This will not be remedied by the new safety bill proposed by the Johnson administration.

SUPPRESSING REPORTS

Furthermore, the Division of Accident Protection in the Health, Education, and Welfare Department has long followed a deliberate policy of suppressing accident reports paid for by the taxpayer.

When this charge was made in the Senate hearings by Ralph Nader, the young attorney who sparked the entire probe of auto safety, Phil Lee, newly appointed assistnat Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, was frank enough to tell Nader publicly that he was quite right.

In fact, Leon Goldstein, chief of Grants Research in the Division of Accident Prevention, has even refused to let his superior, Assistant Secretary Lee, see some of the accident reports.

Some of these reports cost as much as $900,000 -- all paid for by the taxpayer. Yet Goldstein refuses to make some of them public.

"I want to make sure these reports are not misinterpreted by misinformed people," Goldstein explains.

One important study, costing the taxpayer $170,000, was made by Public Service Research of Stamford, Conn., and is a treatise on the accident characteristics of the Chevy, Plymouth and Ford. While the report has been made public, the cars are identified only as "A, B, and C," so the reader has no way of knowing whether "A" refers to the Chevy, "B" to the Ford, "C" to Plymouth, or vice versa.

Another report, written by Prof. James Ryan of the University of Minnesota and costing $90,000, is on "crashworthy designs for automobiles." Dr. Ryan developed a hydraulic bumper which he tried out by crashing into a brick wall at a speed of 20 miles an hour. Despite a weak heart, he survived. With any other bumper he would have been killed.

WHERE IS REUTHER?

After that, however, the industry treated him as a stepchild. His funds were cut off. He was dropped from the University of Minnesota and investigated by the auto industry. His original report has not been released, though paid for by the taxpayers. Ryan, however, is no crackpot. He has too many patents in his name, including the flight recorder now used on all airplanes to record what happens in aviation accidents.

Rep. John Moss, D-Calif., is indignant over this supression of vital facts to which the public is entitled and plans to cross-examine industry officials.

One report gathering dust in the HEW's division of accident prevention was written by Goldstein himself when a professor at George Washington University, on the subject of "driver behavior." It cost $260,000. No one really knows what the taxpayer got for his money.

Amazing fact is that two potent organizations affected by the accident probe haven't been heard from. They are: Walter Reuther's United Auto Workers and the Casualty Insurance people.

For years the insurance companies have been harping on the subject of auto safety. Every holiday weekend, they have helped announce the gruesome total of auto fatalities. Yet no indication has come from the insurance companies that they would like to testify regarding government moves to insure auto safety. The insurance companies apparently want to stand on the side of industrial power, not public safety.

This column is supposed to report what goes on behind the scenes in Washington, so here is a report on what has been going on behind the scenes in the Sen. Tom Dodd investigation.

Early in our development of this story, Jack Anderson notified the FBI that we had certain important documents pertaining to the ethics of a key senator, and invited the FBI around to study and evaluate the documents.

Mr. Anderson, I might add, not having been around Washington as long as I, labors under the impression that the FBI is anxious to root out and suppress wrong-doing wherever it may be -- even in high places.

The FBI, therefore, with Mr. Anderson's cooperation photographed every scrap of evidence we had. When some of the photos didn't develop clearly, the FBI even came back and rephotographed.

Jack had also been working with half a dozen prospective witnesses, all former Dodd employees, to tell the FBI what they knew of Dodd's misconduct. These were young people who had been shocked at what was happening in Dodd's office and departed. They felt under moral obligation to report what was happening.

Mr. Anderson offered to produce these witnesses, no strings attached, for the FBI.

FBI CROSS-EXAMINES

The G-men called on the witnesses all right, but didn't ask a single question about Dodd, his conduct, whether he had diverted funds from testimonial dinners to his own pocket and whether he had acted on behalf of a foreign agent, Gen. Julius Klein.

Instead, the FBI cross-examined these young people about the alleged theft of Dodd's documents. They also heckled them about other stories Jack Anderson and I had written, including how we got the unpublished manuscript of the Cosa Nostra squealer, Joe Valachi. What this had to do with the Dodd case is hard to explain, but the FBI didn't try to explain it.

These witnesses are clean-cut young men and women, who believe senators are not above the law and that it should not be against the law to document corruption charges against a U.S. senator. They are not disgruntled employees who came running to us with information against their boss. We sought them out; it took weeks to persuade them that their first loyalty sould be to their country, not to Dodd.

However, the public can judge for itself these witnesses if they are ever given a chance to testify.

As fast as the FBI discovered the identity of the witnesses, they were bullied and badgered, hounded and harassed. One lost his job on a House committee; the news of his dismissal came from Dodd's office. Another, who decided it was his duty to testify against Dodd, felt it improper to remain in Dodd's office. Since submitting his resignation, he has been unable to find another job. Others have had their jobs threatened.

One woman, seven months pregnant, was grilled by agents for three hours. Another Senate employee, who simply had been gossiping about the case, hardly got back to his office before the G-men descended upon him and pumped him to find out what he knew.

Agents hauled some witnesses right into Dodd's office for cross-examination and behaved as if they were working for the Senator. Other witnesses were alternately soft-soaped and threatened with federal prosecution.

I have been around Washington a long time, but have never seen such an example of police state operation.

Such investigations, of course, do not happen by accident. They usually go beyond the attorney general, Mr. Katzenbach, an awfully nice guy, but a bit wishy-washy when it comes to standing up to the White House or the Senate Judiciary Committee of which Tom Dodd is a member.

Such investigations usually go right up to the President himself. Mr. Johnson has on his desk a direct private phone to J. Edgar Hoover. They are very old friends, dating back to the days when I used to visit in Lyndon's home when he was a gawky young congressman from Texas living just across the street from J. Edgar Hoover's well - appointed bachelor abode.

Lyndon is not only a friend of Hoover's but he is a friend of Dodd's. It takes a real friend to make the two trips he made to Connecticut to speak at two testimonial dinners which raised $100,000 for Tom's personal bank account.

After the 1961 testimonial, Dodd's political lieutenant, Ed Sullivan, wrote to him: "Charles McDonough (an insurance executive) drove Vice President Johnson back to the airport after dinner. On the way, he told Charlie under no condition would he miss your dinner. He said he considers you and Grace (Mrs. Dodd) amongst the best friends of he and Mrs. Johnson, and considers you on the Senate floor the best friend he has."

Lyndon did all right for Tom. He hoisted him to a choice position on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, ahead of other senators, a vantage point from which he was able to work more effectively for Gen. Julius Klein. And he almost picked Tom to run with him for vice president.

Such is part of the inside story of what goes on in Washington.

Tipton Trio to Present Concert Here Saturday

The Tipton Trio will present the closing concert of the Delta Community Concert Association season at 8 p.m. Saturday in the junior high school auditorium.

Flutist - Director Albert Tipton won the fall complement of laurels when he brought the chamber orchestra to Community Concert members in 1957. Those who have followed his rise in the musical world agree that Tipton has never been willing to rest on those laurels and has constantly worked to increase his skill and improve his performance until now he is, as Leopold Stokowski described him, "a man of great musical experience and highest musical ideals.

These ideals have led him to select pianist Mary Norris, and Mario di Fiore, cellist, who with Tipton comprise a trio which will bring a rare treat to Sikeston.

Although not heard too often, the tonal combination of flute and cello with piano is beautiful. The brilliance and flexibility of the flute in the hands of a master flutist, coupled and contrasted with the warm and mellow tones of the cello will be amply demonstrated in Saturday's concert. Included will be solo numbers by each member of the trio as each is a true concert-artist in his own right.

On the Set With 'The King And I'

By Thedamay Cleek

Thelma Bush is in charge of choreography for "The King and I." One of the most difficult but delightful surprises in this popular musical by Rogers and Hammerstein is the play within a play, the ballet of "The Small House of Uncle Thomas."

As Tuptim, a slave girl of the king, narrates the story, the excitement mounts as Eliza flees from "King Simon of Legree" and his thirsty bloodhounds.

Eliza, portrayed by Patty Bush, sets off in search of her lover, "Angel George," played by Cyndi Waters. King Simon has sold George to a faraway province, "Oheeo." In the "journey" and ensuing "chase" Eliza is always just a short distance ahead of the "King," played by Kathy Tenkhoff, and his guards and dogs.

Many obstacles such as rainstorms, mountains, rivers, "etc., etc., etc." makes poor Eliza wonder if she will ever escape. However, Buddah makes a miracle and Eliza safely crosses the frozen river and is re-united with lover George. Of course as in all good stories, the villain dies and in this version of the story, Topsy, played by Janie Vandivort, dances for joy.

But with blessings of Buddah also comes sacrifice and Little Eva, played by Viney Ralph, must die and go to the arms of Buddah.

Other characters are Uncle Thomas, played by Debbie Wheeler, guards of the king, Sally Mitchell, Anne Heckemeyer, and Cyd Mitchell. The bloodhounds are Kim Bailey and Terri Terrell and the following supporting dancers: Sandy Simpson, Janet Caldwell, Marilyn Bowman, Peggy McMullin, Linda Hale, Beverly Barnes and Nancye Trigg.

The costumes for this ballet are quite remote from the familiar "Uncle Toms Cabin" and incidently, so is the action. There is a pleasant surprise in store for theatre-goers as the Siamese children give their version of this famous American classic.

Nora McMullin is hard at work with her crew on costuming and I will give a report on this phase of the play next.

Tipton Trio to Present Concert Here Saturday

The Tipton Trio will present the closing concert of the Delta Community Concert Association season at 8 p.m. Saturday in the junior high school auditorium.

Flutist - Director Albert Tipton won the fall complement of laurels when he brought the chamber orchestra to Community Concert members in 1957. Those who have followed his rise in the musical world agree that Tipton has never been willing to rest on those laurels and has constantly worked to increase his skill and improve his performance until now he is, as Leopold Stokowski described him, "a man of great musical experience and highest musical ideals.

These ideals have led him to select pianist Mary Norris, and Mario di Fiore, cellist, who with Tipton comprise a trio which will bring a rare treat to Sikeston.

Although not heard too often, the tonal combination of flute and cello with piano is beautiful. The brilliance and flexibility of the flute in the hands of a master flutist, coupled and contrasted with the warm and mellow tones of the cello will be amply demonstrated in Saturday's concert. Included will be solo numbers by each member of the trio as each is a true concert-artist in his own right.

"The price of greatness is responsibility. If the people of the United States had remained in a mediocre station, struggling with the wilderness, absorbed in their own affairs, and a factor of no consequence in the movements of the world, they might have remained forgotten and undisturbed, beyond their protecting ocean."

On the Set With 'The King And I'

By Thedamay Cleek

Thelma Bush is in charge of choreography for "The King and I." One of the most difficult but delightful surprises in this popular musical by Rogers and Hammerstein is the play within a play, the ballet of "The Small House of Uncle Thomas."

As Tuptim, a slave girl of the king, narrates the story, the excitement mounts as Eliza flees from "King Simon of Legree" and his thirsty bloodhounds.

Eliza, portrayed by Patty Bush, sets off in search of her lover, "Angel George," played by Cyndi Waters. King Simon has sold George to a faraway province, "Oheeo." In the "journey" and ensuing "chase" Eliza is always just a short distance ahead of the "King," played by Kathy Tenkhoff, and his guards and dogs.

Many obstacles such as rainstorms, mountains, rivers, "etc., etc., etc." makes poor Eliza wonder if she will ever escape. However, Buddah makes a miracle and Eliza safely crosses the frozen river and is re-united with lover George. Of course as in all good stories, the villain dies and in this version of the story, Topsy, played by Janie Vandivort, dances for joy.

But with blessings of Buddah also comes sacrifice and Little Eva, played by Viney Ralph, must die and go to the arms of Buddah.

Other characters are Uncle Thomas, played by Debbie Wheeler, guards of the king, Sally Mitchell, Anne Heckemeyer, and Cyd Mitchell. The bloodhounds are Kim Bailey and Terri Terrell and the following supporting dancers: Sandy Simpson, Janet Caldwell, Marilyn Bowman, Peggy McMullin, Linda Hale, Beverly Barnes and Nancye Trigg.

The costumes for this ballet are quite remote from the familiar "Uncle Toms Cabin" and incidently, so is the action. There is a pleasant surprise in store for theatre-goers as the Siamese children give their version of this famous American classic.

Nora McMullin is hard at work with her crew on costuming and I will give a report on this phase of the play next.

Dan Kern Hurls No Hitter In Sub-District Tourney At Oran

The Sikeston Bulldogs once again beat the Eagles of Oran yesterday as Dan Kern pleased the fans with a no-hit pitching performance. Kern struck out five and walked four in the 7-0 decision. This extends the Bulldog record to 4 wins against no losses.

ORAN -- Richard Montgomery led off the first inning for the Bulldogs by popping out to the pitcher. Wayne Limbaugh flied to left field. Mike Garner by a pitch, and Rudy Manley struck out to end the Bulldog offensive in the first inning.

In the bottom of the first Schaeffer struck out, Clark drew a base on balls, Metz forced Clark out at second, and Hahn grounded out to first-baseman Mike Couch.

Mike Couch, Jim Ramsey, and Max Ellison struck out in order in the Bulldog half of the second inning. Oran's Gosche grounded out to second, Johnson struck out, Graham walked, and Whorton grounded out to end the second inning.

In the third, Carl Barnett struck out, then Dan Kern singled and advanced to second on a passed ball, Richard Montgomery then grounded to shortstop. The shortstop threw to third in an attempt to force Kern but the third-baseman dropped the ball in a collision with Kern. Montgomery got caught between first and second, but managed to reach second safely. Limbaugh then reached first on a fielder's choice, and Kern scored on a close play. Garner then tripled, scoring Montgomery and Limbaugh, coming in to score when the ball was thrown wild. Manley then struck out for the second out. Couch singled, Ramsey walked, and Ellison was hit by a pitch to load the bases. Barnett struck out to end the inning for the Bulldogs.

In the top of the fourth, Kern was thrown out at first. Montgomery grounded to shortstop for the second out. Then Limbaugh doubled, Garner singled, and Manley scored Limbaugh on an error. Couch ended the top of the fourth by striking out.

Ramsey reached first on an error on the center fielder to open the fifth. Ellison was thrown out, Bailey struck out, and Kern struck out, stranding Ramsey on third base.

Montgomery led off in the sixth with a single, matched by Limbaugh, and then Manley scored both runners with a single, and went to second on the throw to the plate. Couch struck out and Dave Shy, substituting for Ramsey, grounded to second base for the final out.

In the final inning Wiss, substituting for Ellison, drew a walk, then Bailey flied out to right field, Kern struck out, Montgomery doubled, moving Wiss to third, Limbaugh grounded out to third, ending the Bulldog offensive game.

Coach Hal Lane said about yesterday's game, "I think the boys did a really fine job. The hitting is improving, as is the defensive game. There were fifteen putouts on the infield, and only one ball reached the outfield. I'm really proud of them."

Sikeston once again outclassed Oran in the statistical side of the game. The Bulldogs outhit the Eagles 9-0, again showing the power of their hitting and defense. Sikeston now has scored 26 runs on 38 hits, as compared to 4 runs on 8 hits by the opponents.

Richard Montgomery leads the Bulldog hitting with an impressive .529, followed by Wayne Limbaugh with .429.

Sikeston's game scheduled for today has been postponed due to the rain.

Richland beat Scott Central 4-2 in the first game by scoring 3 runs in the final inning and defeated Advance in the third game by the same score.

Phillies Shut-Out Pirates 5-0

Ken Johnson's variety of 12 pitches might have fooled Willie Mays, but as far as Jose Pagan is concerned none could have been as evasive as Jim Bunning's bunt pitch.

Bunning so befuddled Pagan that he obliterated a budding Pittsburgh rally and went on to pitch Philadelphia to a 5-0 victory Monday night.

Johnson held Mays hitless in Atlanta's 5-0 triumph over San Francisco, preventing the Giants' star from setting a National League records for career home runs.

"I wasn't thinking about his record," Johnson said afterward. "I was just thinking about winning. I just try not to give him the same pitch twice. I have six pitches, and I throw them from two different angles so that gives me 12 different pitches."

Pagan didn't have much to say after his performance against Bunning. It came in the third inning of a scoreless game and followed no-out singles by pitcher Bob Veale and Matty Alou.

Pagan came to the plate intending to bunt, but he let Bunning's pitch go by, and Veale was trapped off second. The throw from catcher Bob Uecker to shortstop Dick Groat nailed the first out.

Then while Bunning was concentrating on Pagan, Alou stole second. And when Bunning concerned himself with Alou, the pitcher threw the ball into center field, allowing Alou to reach third.

By this time Pagan had two strikes on him, but that didn't stop him from pursuing the bunt. The squeeze play was called for.

Pagan, however, missed the pitch for strike three and the second out and Alou was trapped off third and run down for the third out.

It was almost as if Pagan swung — or didn't swing — into a triple play.

Johnson limited the Giants to three hits while retiring Mays on a pop up, a strikeout and a liner. Mays, seeking his 512th home run, also walked. Johnson received support from Lee Thomas' three-run homer and Hank Aaron's two-run blast.

Bunning stopped the Pirates on five hits and got the only run he needed when Rich Allen homered in the fourth. The Phillies added four runs in the sixth, two on a single by Cookie Rojas.

Mike Cuellar pitched a five-hitter as Houston handed Cincinnati its seventh defeat in the last eight games. John Bateman doubled across an Astro run in the fifth, and Jim Gentile snapped a 1-1 with a run-scoring single in the sixth.

Griffith Wins Middle Weight Title

By JIM HACKLEMAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — An explosive right-hand punch that traveled scant inches carried Emile Griffith to his second world boxing championship.

But to the flashy Virgin Islander with the steely muscles and quick moves, the blow might as well have been an accident.

"I never tried to knock him out — never, at any point. Not even when I had him down. The thought never crossed my mind."

But the short right that floored Dick Tiger in the ninth round of Tuesday night's 15-rounder at Madison Square Garden meant the difference. It enabled Griffith to take the middleweight title away from the 37-year-old Nigerian in a tight decision.

The new middleweight champ was a bit on the defensive about the defense-oriented fight he made against Tiger. He backpedaled considerably and was not his usual aggressive self.

"I just kept moving," he yelled, straining to make his voice heard above the din in his packed, steam-hot dressing room. "I'm a boxer . . . I just wanted to keep moving. I opened up when I had to."

Tiger was angry — close to bitter. But the only challenge he made to the outcome was an enigmatic: "I hope the winner of this fight got the decision."

He questioned Griffith's caution, saying, "It takes two fighters to make a fight," and "I thought he would come to me, but he ran away."

Roland Sheldon took the loss, his second without a victory.

Rocky Colavito set an American League record in the game. The Indian rightfielder has now gone 195 consecutive games without an error.

McDowell Blanks Athletics On One Hit

BY HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

It takes two to tango but the way Sam McDowell and Del Crandall were working on Kansas City, it looked more like a torrid twist with the Athletics in the middle.

McDowell, Cleveland's fireballing left-hander, hurled a one-hitter Monday night, beat the Athletics 2-0 and afterwards he gave most of the credit to his journeyman catcher, Crandall.

"I don't want to take anything away from our other catchers," the Indian ace said, "but Del has the experience. He came out to the mound twice and both times he caught things I was doing wrong."

McDowell, now 3-0, has had Crandall as his batterymate in each of his four starts and he likes the idea of pitching to the 36-year-old veteran.

"I shook him off a couple of times in the opener," said McDowell. "It's different now. We're working together in sort of an easy rhythm. Like a dance team."

McDowell was waltzing along on a no-hitter for five innings against Kansas City before Jose Tartabull's looping single leading off the sixth broke the spell.

The hit was the only one the A's managed as McDowell struck out eight. Larry Brown drove in both Indian runs with a two-out, bases-loaded single in the sixth inning.

Elsewhere in the American League, Denny McLain hurled a four-hitter as Detroit blanked Minnesota 3-0, Chicago shaded Washington 3-2 despite a titantic home run by Frank Howard, and Boston handed New York its seventh straight loss 8-5.

In the National League, Houston edged Cincinnati 7-1, Atlanta blanked San Francisco 5-0, Philadelphia shut out Pittsburgh 5-0 and St. Louis extended Los Angeles' runless string to three games with a 2-0 victory.

McLain got home run support from Norm Cash and Al Kaline to beat the Twins for his third victory of the season. Cash walloped a bases-empty homer in the fourth and McLain protected the slim lead until Kaline's two-run shot in the eighth gave him some breathing space.

Tom McCraw's ninth inning sacrifice fly beat the Senators for Chicago but Howard's homer stole the show. It was still rising when it zoomed into the mezzanine seats in deepest center field, 480 feet from home plate. It was believed to be the longest homer in the five-year history of D.C. Stadium.

Howard pooh-poohed the excitement over his shot. "I've hit 'em further," he said. "Would you believe it?"

Bulldog Netmen Defeated 3-2

The Sikeston Bulldogs Tennis team met Chaffee yesterday and were defeated, but only by a narrow 3-2 margin. Sikeston did however win all three of their exhibition matches, with Tommy Eaton beating Stubbs 6-1 in singles and Brad Crumpecker and Dean Childers beating Colley and O'Riley 6-3 in doubles. In the other exhibition doubles Wythe Miller and Gary Grant beat Tucker and Hampton 6-2. In the regular matches Robinson of Chaffee beat Billy Dickerson 9-7, Sikeston's Henry Lippert beat Sadler of Chaffee 8-6, and Dean Childers beat Chaffee's Moyers 8-3, giving Sikeston a 2-1 edge in the singles.

Sikeston lost both of their regular doubles though as Robinson and Sadler beat Dickerson and Lippert 8-4 and Miller and Humes fell to Moyers and Margrabe 8-6. The tennis Bulldogs meet Cape tomorrow at the high school courts at 3:30. The team appreciates any spectator who drives out to watch them compete.

Sikeston's golf team traveled to Cape where they were beat four strokes by Cape Central on their tough home course at the Cape Girardeau Country Club. Charles Stamp shot the low number of strokes for Sikeston with a 40. He was followed by Chuck Meyer who fired a 41, and Charles Atchison and David Whiteaker both shot a 45. Spradling was the low man for Cape with a 38, followed by Cochran with a 40, Stiver with a 44 and Kaiser with a 45. Monday the golf team journeys to Dexter to face their team. All the area golf teams are fairly evenly matched this year and though Dexter has a home course advantage, the contest could go either way.

CRAPPIE FISHERMEN SAY this is the time of year for crappie fishing. Virtually every lake in the Middle West has an abundant supply of these big pan fish. One of the most successful angling forays coming to our attention this week was made by a quartet of district men last week at Sardis Lake in Mississippi, where in two days of fishing with large minnows they took 150 crappie running from one to 2 1/4 pounds each, and a pair of good bass. They fished out of Holiday Lodge. The lake is not unknown to local anglers, many have fished there in the past. Making the trip were Grady Lunceford of Memphis, Tenn.; L. H. Shipman of Illmo, Nunnie Miller of Oran and E. R. Gemeinhardt of Bell City.

Dan Kern Hurls No Hitter In Sub-District Tourney At Oran

The Sikeston Bulldogs once again beat the Eagles of Oran yesterday as Dan Kern pleased the fans with a no-hit pitching performance. Kern struck out five and walked four in the 7-0 decision. This extends the Bulldog record to 4 wins against no losses.

ORAN -- Richard Montgomery led off the first inning for the Bulldogs by popping out to the pitcher. Wayne Limbaugh flied to left field. Mike Garner by a pitch, and Rudy Manley struck out to end the Bulldog offensive in the first inning.

In the bottom of the first Schaeffer struck out, Clark drew a base on balls, Metz forced Clark out at second, and Hahn grounded out to first-baseman Mike Couch.

Mike Couch, Jim Ramsey, and Max Ellison struck out in order in the Bulldog half of the second inning. Oran's Gosche grounded out to second, Johnson struck out, Graham walked, and Whorton grounded out to end the second inning.

In the third, Carl Barnett struck out, then Dan Kern singled and advanced to second on a passed ball, Richard Montgomery then grounded to shortstop. The shortstop threw to third in an attempt to force Kern but the third-baseman dropped the ball in a collision with Kern. Montgomery got caught between first and second, but managed to reach second safely. Limbaugh then reached first on a fielder's choice, and Kern scored on a close play. Garner then tripled, scoring Montgomery and Limbaugh, coming in to score when the ball was thrown wild. Manley then struck out for the second out. Couch singled, Ramsey walked, and Ellison was hit by a pitch to load the bases. Barnett struck out to end the inning for the Bulldogs.

In the top of the fourth, Kern was thrown out at first. Montgomery grounded to shortstop for the second out. Then Limbaugh doubled, Garner singled, and Manley scored Limbaugh on an error. Couch ended the top of the fourth by striking out.

Ramsey reached first on an error on the center fielder to open the fifth. Ellison was thrown out, Bailey struck out, and Kern struck out, stranding Ramsey on third base.

Montgomery led off in the sixth with a single, matched by Limbaugh, and then Manley scored both runners with a single, and went to second on the throw to the plate. Couch struck out and Dave Shy, substituting for Ramsey, grounded to second base for the final out.

In the final inning Wiss, substituting for Ellison, drew a walk, then Bailey flied out to right field, Kern struck out, Montgomery doubled, moving Wiss to third, Limbaugh grounded out to third, ending the Bulldog offensive game.

Coach Hal Lane said about yesterday's game, "I think the boys did a really fine job. The hitting is improving, as is the defensive game. There were fifteen putouts on the infield, and only one ball reached the outfield. I'm really proud of them."

Sikeston once again outclassed Oran in the statistical side of the game. The Bulldogs outhit the Eagles 9-0, again showing the power of their hitting and defense. Sikeston now has scored 26 runs on 38 hits, as compared to 4 runs on 8 hits by the opponents.

Richard Montgomery leads the Bulldog hitting with an impressive .529, followed by Wayne Limbaugh with .429.

Sikeston's game scheduled for today has been postponed due to the rain.

Richland beat Scott Central 4-2 in the first game by scoring 3 runs in the final inning and defeated Advance in the third game by the same score.

McDowell Blanks Athletics On One Hit

BY HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

It takes two to tango but the way Sam McDowell and Del Crandall were working on Kansas City, it looked more like a torrid twist with the Athletics in the middle.

McDowell, Cleveland's fireballing left-hander, hurled a one-hitter Monday night, beat the Athletics 2-0 and afterwards he gave most of the credit to his journeyman catcher, Crandall.

"I don't want to take anything away from our other catchers," the Indian ace said, "but Del has the experience. He came out to the mound twice and both times he caught things I was doing wrong."

McDowell, now 3-0, has had Crandall as his batterymate in each of his four starts and he likes the idea of pitching to the 36-year-old veteran.

"I shook him off a couple of times in the opener," said McDowell. "It's different now. We're working together in sort of an easy rhythm. Like a dance team."

McDowell was waltzing along on a no-hitter for five innings against Kansas City before Jose Tartabull's looping single leading off the sixth broke the spell.

The hit was the only one the A's managed as McDowell struck out eight. Larry Brown drove in both Indian runs with a two-out, bases-loaded single in the sixth inning.

Elsewhere in the American League, Denny McLain hurled a four-hitter as Detroit blanked Minnesota 3-0, Chicago shaded Washington 3-2 despite a titantic home run by Frank Howard, and Boston handed New York its seventh straight loss 8-5.

In the National League, Houston edged Cincinnati 7-1, Atlanta blanked San Francisco 5-0, Philadelphia shut out Pittsburgh 5-0 and St. Louis extended Los Angeles' runless string to three games with a 2-0 victory.

McLain got home run support from Norm Cash and Al Kaline to beat the Twins for his third victory of the season. Cash walloped a bases-empty homer in the fourth and McLain protected the slim lead until Kaline's two-run shot in the eighth gave him some breathing space.

Tom McCraw's ninth inning sacrifice fly beat the Senators for Chicago but Howard's homer stole the show. It was still rising when it zoomed into the mezzanine seats in deepest center field, 480 feet from home plate. It was believed to be the longest homer in the five-year history of D.C. Stadium.

Howard pooh-poohed the excitement over his shot. "I've hit 'em further," he said. "Would you believe it?"

Bulldog Netmen Defeated 3-2

The Sikeston Bulldogs Tennis team met Chaffee yesterday and were defeated, but only by a narrow 3-2 margin. Sikeston did however win all three of their exhibition matches, with Tommy Eaton beating Stubbs 6-1 in singles and Brad Crumpecker and Dean Childers beating Colley and O'Riley 6-3 in doubles. In the other exhibition doubles Wythe Miller and Gary Grant beat Tucker and Hampton 6-2. In the regular matches Robinson of Chaffee beat Billy Dickerson 9-7, Sikeston's Henry Lippert beat Sadler of Chaffee 8-6, and Dean Childers beat Chaffee's Moyers 8-3, giving Sikeston a 2-1 edge in the singles.

Sikeston lost both of their regular doubles though as Robinson and Sadler beat Dickerson and Lippert 8-4 and Miller and Humes fell to Moyers and Margrabe 8-6. The tennis Bulldogs meet Cape tomorrow at the high school courts at 3:30. The team appreciates any spectator who drives out to watch them compete.

Sikeston's golf team traveled to Cape where they were beat four strokes by Cape Central on their tough home course at the Cape Girardeau Country Club. Charles Stamp shot the low number of strokes for Sikeston with a 40. He was followed by Chuck Meyer who fired a 41, and Charles Atchison and David Whiteaker both shot a 45. Spradling was the low man for Cape with a 38, followed by Cochran with a 40, Stiver with a 44 and Kaiser with a 45. Monday the golf team journeys to Dexter to face their team. All the area golf teams are fairly evenly matched this year and though Dexter has a home course advantage, the contest could go either way.

CRAPPIE FISHERMEN SAY this is the time of year for crappie fishing. Virtually every lake in the Middle West has an abundant supply of these big pan fish. One of the most successful angling forays coming to our attention this week was made by a quartet of district men last week at Sardis Lake in Mississippi, where in two days of fishing with large minnows they took 150 crappie running from one to 2 1/4 pounds each, and a pair of good bass. They fished out of Holiday Lodge. The lake is not unknown to local anglers, many have fished there in the past. Making the trip were Grady Lunceford of Memphis, Tenn.; L. H. Shipman of Illmo, Nunnie Miller of Oran and E. R. Gemeinhardt of Bell City.

The biggest mystery to a married man is what a bachelor does with his money.

Most men think this GMC Pickup costs a lot more than it really does.

$1795
Can you blame them?
It looks like big money. Take the exclusive V-6 engine. Many have gone 150,000 miles and more without major overhaul. About half that is average for most competitive engines, but the V-6 isn't just average. Four headlamps, not two. And that GMC nameplate means it's built, sold and serviced by truck people. The real price? I'm waiting to surprise you.

Our Bourbon is as old as the Hills.

Back in 1879, William and Scipio Hill, a pair of Kentucky cousins, opened a distillery.

They made precious little of their Bourbon, but what they made came up precious good. Rich and full. And so incredibly smooth that the Hill cousins were able to sell their whiskey for three times the going price.

Today, Hill & Hill is still made the same old way. As patiently as the Hill cousins meant it to be.

So be thankful you can get your Bourbon straight from the Hills of Kentucky.

Fire Destroys Chaffee Home

CHAFFEE -- A two-story frame house was destroyed by fire Sunday. The house occupied by the Willis Williams family, was located at 312 Helen.

Firemen were called at 11:30 p.m. and reported the fire had been burning some time. The fire apparently started in the kitchen, but the cause was not determined. The Williams family was not at home.

Firemen said there was a threat the fire might spread since the houses in the vicinity are on 40-foot lots.

Damage to the house was estimated at $3,000 to $4,000. No damage estimate of the contents has been made.

The common idea that success spoils people by making them vain, egotistic and self-complacent is erroneous; on the contrary, it makes them, for the most part, humble, tolerant, and kind. Failure makes people cruel and bitter.

Fire Destroys Chaffee Home

CHAFFEE -- A two-story frame house was destroyed by fire Sunday. The house occupied by the Willis Williams family, was located at 312 Helen.

Firemen were called at 11:30 p.m. and reported the fire had been burning some time. The fire apparently started in the kitchen, but the cause was not determined. The Williams family was not at home.

Firemen said there was a threat the fire might spread since the houses in the vicinity are on 40-foot lots.

Damage to the house was estimated at $3,000 to $4,000. No damage estimate of the contents has been made.

The common idea that success spoils people by making them vain, egotistic and self-complacent is erroneous; on the contrary, it makes them, for the most part, humble, tolerant, and kind. Failure makes people cruel and bitter.

The Prayer
For Today From The Upper Room

TUESDAY, APRIL 26, 1966

"I have spoken thus to you, so that my joy may be in you, and your joy complete." (John 15:11, NEB)

PRAYER: God, our Father, grant us wisdom and strength that we may be patient in loving our neighbors and in serving Thee. Renew in us the joy of knowing Thee and make us Thine instruments in proclaiming that joy to others around us. In Jesus' name. Amen.

Dr. Shepard and two other outstanding educators were honored by the college of education with citations of merit for distinguished service to education.

Uncle Sam to Increase Withholding Bite

WASHINGTON (AP) — Uncle Sam begins next week to take a bigger chunk of the average American paycheck to help finance the Viet Nam war.

It is the first graduated withholding system in U.S. history and for millions it means less take-home pay. But for others, especially low income families, less federal income tax will be deducted from their paychecks.

Everybody's over-all tax bill for the year will remain the same. The new system is designed merely to bring the amount withheld from paychecks closer to a person's actual taxes.

Since the plan will withdraw about $800 million from the economy by Dec. 31, government economists also hope it will dampen inflationary trends which could lead to a tax increase later.

Beginning May 1, taxes will be withheld from paychecks at six different rates —14, 15, 17, 20, 25 and 30 per cent.

At present income taxes are withheld at a uniform 14 per cent based only on the taxpayer's salary and number of exemptions he claims.

The new system includes these factors but also takes into account the standard deduction and whether a taxpayer is married. Thus, a taxpayer can take advantage of the split income provisions of federal tax law as part of his withholding for the first time.

The split income provisions allow a married couple a lower tax rate. Previously, this could be used only in figuring taxes at the end of the year. Under the new system, taxes can be withheld at this lower rate.

Parma B&PW Club Attends Convention

PARMA -- Delegates of the Parma Business and Professional Women's Club left Friday for Kansas City, where they attended the 1966 State BPW Convention. Delegates from Caruthersville, Hayti, and Kennett went on the bus. Parma delegates boarded the bus in Malden and stops were made at Dexter for delegates from the Dexter, Sikeston and Cape Girardeau Clubs; and at Poplar Bluff for their delegates and those from Doniphan.

These area clubs make up District Six. There are 119 clubs in the state with more than 6,400 members. In the national federation there are 175,000 members. In addition to the United States, there are clubs in 28 other countries.

This year the convention had special significance for the Malden BPW. At the convention held April 22-24 at the Continental Hotel in Kansas City, Mrs. Margaret Rone of Hayti was installed state president for 1966-67. The Malden club has been involved the past few months in preparation for this occasion. In December the local club was host for a planning meeting for the convention and again in March to make final preparations for the installation of Mrs. Rone.

District Six was in charge of the installation breakfast at 9 a.m. Sunday morning, held in the Ballroom of the hotel. The theme of the breakfast was "Cotton Carnival," since Mrs. Rone is employed by Southeast Missouri Compress Company in Hayti. Each club in District Six made a miniature float for the parade of clubs for the president's table at the breakfast. Other carnival motifs decorated the individual tables, all made by District Six members.

Miss Georgia Green, member of the Malden BPW Club, sang as part of the devotional on the Sunday morning program, and at the Golden Key Banquet on Saturday evening in the Grand Ballroom of Hotel Muehlbach.

The Hayti BPW Club held a reception following the Saturday evening banquet honoring Mrs. Rone. Mrs. Mary Eaker of the Malden Club and Mrs. Gaye Ramsey of the Parma Club were on the entertainment committee for the occasion.

Saturday noon there was a special luncheon honoring all state Gold Card members. These members had secured five or more new club members during the past year.

Jets Down MIG

SAIGON (AP)—An American supersonic jet fighter shot down an MIG21 today over North Viet Nam, a U.S. spokesman announced.

The MIG, newest and fastest type used by the Communists in Asia, was hit by Sidewinder missiles in a brief aerial duel 65 miles northeast of the North Vietnamese capital of Hanoi, the spokesman said.

It was downed by an F4C Phantom fighter in a dogfight in which two Phantoms attacked two MIG21s.

Neither of the U.S. planes was damaged, the spokesman said.

It was the first MIG21 kill of the Viet Nam war and the eighth Soviet-built fighter downed in the conflict. The previous seven were the older - version MIG17s.

The pilot of the destroyed MIG was believed to have ejected before his flaming plane crashed, the spokesman said.

The Sidewinder missile used against the MIG is a heat-seeking projectile which seeks out and climbs into the hot tailpipe of enemy aircraft.

The spokesman did not disclose how many Sidewinders were fired. He said further details of the encounter would be available Wednesday.

Two of the delta-winged Communist fighters and two Phantoms dueled undamaged to a standoff north of Hanoi Monday. American planes and the Soviet-built MIGs had clashed three times Saturday.

Both aircraft are capable of flying better than twice the speed of sound. The Phantoms are rated slightly faster, but the MIGs are perhaps a little more maneuverable and represent a serious threat to the American jets.

The reappearance of the high-performance MIG21s bore out belief that the Communists mean to challenge U.S. air superiority over North Viet Nam as American planes strike closer and harder at vital areas around Hanoi, the capital, and Haiphong, the chief port.

Until Saturday, U.S. jets had been undisturbed by enemy planes over the Communist north for 10 months. As on Saturday, the MIGs Monday were not identified by nationality.

U. S. planes flew a total of 65 missions over the north Monday. The targets included a suspected surface - to - air missile site, petroleum storage areas, ferry complexes and highway bridges.

Optimistic About Individual Rights

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—Dr. John P. Humphrey, "Mr. Human Rights" at the United Nations for almost 20 years, believes man is winning his battle to maintain his individual rights in a society growing more complex every day.

At 61, Humphrey is retiring as director of the U.N. Division of Human Rights to return to the law faculty of McGill University in Montreal. He had been named dean of students there just before he took his new U.N. assignment in 1946. He is a native of Hampton, N.B.

He is not retiring from work in the field of human rights. He has been elected to membership on the Subcommission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities — a subsidiary group of the U.N. Human Rights Commission. He will attend meetings of the subcommission in January as one of its 18 experts.

In December 1948, the U.N. General Assembly adopted the universal declaration of human rights — the culmination of two years of effort of the Human Rights Commission under the chairmanship of Eleanor Roosevelt.

At the time, Mrs. Roosevelt stressed that the declaration was not binding legally. Humphrey takes the view that now the declaration has become part of customary international law aimed at protecting the individual against organized society.

He says this is so because of the general recognition the declaration has received in the international community. He says it is part of a new body of law which has given the individual new status over the past 20 years.

Jets Down MIG

SAIGON (AP)—An American supersonic jet fighter shot down an MIG21 today over North Viet Nam, a U.S. spokesman announced.

The MIG, newest and fastest type used by the Communists in Asia, was hit by Sidewinder missiles in a brief aerial duel 65 miles northeast of the North Vietnamese capital of Hanoi, the spokesman said.

It was downed by an F4C Phantom fighter in a dogfight in which two Phantoms attacked two MIG21s.

Neither of the U.S. planes was damaged, the spokesman said.

It was the first MIG21 kill of the Viet Nam war and the eighth Soviet-built fighter downed in the conflict. The previous seven were the older - version MIG17s.

The pilot of the destroyed MIG was believed to have ejected before his flaming plane crashed, the spokesman said.

The Sidewinder missile used against the MIG is a heat-seeking projectile which seeks out and climbs into the hot tailpipe of enemy aircraft.

The spokesman did not disclose how many Sidewinders were fired. He said further details of the encounter would be available Wednesday.

Two of the delta-winged Communist fighters and two Phantoms dueled undamaged to a standoff north of Hanoi Monday. American planes and the Soviet-built MIGs had clashed three times Saturday.

Both aircraft are capable of flying better than twice the speed of sound. The Phantoms are rated slightly faster, but the MIGs are perhaps a little more maneuverable and represent a serious threat to the American jets.

The reappearance of the high-performance MIG21s bore out belief that the Communists mean to challenge U.S. air superiority over North Viet Nam as American planes strike closer and harder at vital areas around Hanoi, the capital, and Haiphong, the chief port.

Until Saturday, U.S. jets had been undisturbed by enemy planes over the Communist north for 10 months. As on Saturday, the MIGs Monday were not identified by nationality.

U. S. planes flew a total of 65 missions over the north Monday. The targets included a suspected surface - to - air missile site, petroleum storage areas, ferry complexes and highway bridges.

French Charge NATO Military Command Is Now out of Date

PARIS AP -- Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville says France is quitting the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's military command because it is out of date, but it doesn't want its friendship with the United States to diminish.

"In the nuclear era, this organization does not deal with the essential element of defense which is nuclear defense," Couve de Murville said. "France does not seek a special advantage. She is adopting herself to a new situation and this can only have advantages for the equilibrium and peace in Europe."

President Charles de Gaulle's government contends that NATO's nuclear arsenal is almost entirely owned and controlled by the United States and that NATO has no effective hand in it.

Replying in writing to questions submitted by The Associated Press, the foreign minister said France values American friendship highly. He denied that his government plans a nonaggression pact with the Soviet Union and reiterated that the French would like to "contribute to a peaceful settlement" in Viet Nam.

Couve de Murville said that in withdrawing from the military structure of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, "we are acting normally as any government, in the interests of our country, and we believe besides that what we are doing is in no manner contrary to the well understood interests of our allies."

He stressed that France intends to remain part of the North Atlantic Treaty signed in 1949. He pointed out that the military organization was developed after the treaty was signed and "is in no way a condition of it." The United States feels, however, that the military organization is an essential part of the alliance.

Couve de Murville declared that France had no intention of offending the United States by its stand on NATO or conversion of its excess balance of payments into gold.

"American friendship is an ancient precious value to which we are all attached in France and which we do not wish to see disappear or even diminish," he said.

He noted that the conversion of dollar holdings into gold was provided for by the Bretton Woods agreements and said the United States had always done this in the same circumstances.

France notified its NATO allies last month that U.S. and Canadian forces on its soil must leave within a year and that NATO headquarters in France must withdraw by the same time. The United States wants to extend the time limit for at least another year.

Asked what France proposes to do about paying the costs for relocating NATO, Couve de Murville said: "Settlement of financial problems is a matter for negotiations, according to the provisions of the NATO accords or the Franco-American accords."

The foreign minister denied that French policy was maneuvering the United States into closer cooperation with West Germany in military matters.

THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

A Review of the 1964 Term

ELECTIONS
(Conclusion)

In spite of such clear evidence that the Fourteenth Amendment has nothing whatever to do with the right to vote, in Carrington vs Rash, the Court held by a 7 to 1 vote, with Chief Justice Warren not participating, that a provision of the Texas Constitution and laws which withheld the right to vote from servicemen moving into the State until they had left active military service violated the Fourteenth Amendment. Mr. Justice Stewart, writing for the majority, did not refer to a single bit of evidence from the debates on the Fourteenth Amendment. Instead, his sole authority consisted of excerpts from recent Supreme Court cases which enunciate the philosophy of the Court regarding voting rights. In his lone dissent, Mr. Justice Harlan said:

"In making this holding the Court totally ignores, as it did in last Term's reapportionment cases, Reynolds v. Sims . . . all the history of the Fourteenth Amendment and the course of judicial decisions which together plainly show that the Equal Protection Clause . . . If that history does not prove what I think it does, we are at least entitled to be told why. While I cannot express surprise over today's decision after the reapportionment cases, which though bound to follow I continue to believe are constitutionally indefensible, I can and do respectfully but earnestly, record my protest against this further extension of the Federal judicial power into the political affairs of the States . . .

"I deplore the added impetus which this decision gives to the current tendency of judging constitutional questions on the basis of abstract "justice" unleashed from the limiting principles that go with our constitutional system. Constitutionally principled adjudication, high in the process of which is due recognition of the just demands of federalism, leaves ample room for the protection of individual rights. A constitutional democracy which in order to cope with seeming needs of the moment is willing to temporize with its basic distribution and limitation of governmental powers will sooner or later find itself in trouble."

As if it were not enough to extend the Fourteenth Amendment, the Court also started stretching the Twenty-Fourth (anti-Federal poll tax) Amendment. It held that Virginia could not require a voter who did not pay a poll tax to file a certificate of residence. Although the Amendment outlaws a poll tax only in a Federal election, the Court found that filing a simple piece of paper six months before the election certifying to local residence was such a "cumbersome procedure" as to make it "far preferable to mail in the poll tax payment upon receipt of the bill." Interestingly enough, the Court mentions that the State may enforce its residence requirements by annual personal registration lines for an hour or more, Virginia's statute would seem to be the very essence of simplicity and convenience. To say that it is a more "cumbersome procedure" to require a voter to mail in a piece of paper at any time at his convenience six months before an election, from wherever he is, than to force him to go at a set date and place, both of which may be very inconvenient to him, to register, is surely to put a strain on common sense. To dress such a bizarre notion in the garb of constitutional law is an enshrinement of absurdity which not even the most zealous opponent of poll taxes could have intended.

The World's Weekend

Intensified Air War in Prospect

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The prospect of intensified air war over Viet Nam appeared during the weekend.

American Phantom F4C Supersonic jet fighters battled two new Soviet-built-high-performance MIG21s Saturday for the first time. Neither side scored.

In another encounter, U. S. PILOTS SHOT DOWN TWO MIG 17s in a five-minute dogfight. American fighters had three encounters with Communist aircraft Saturday -- the first aerial battles since last July 10.

No American planes were lost in the dogfights but two air force F105s were lost apparently from ground fire.

In another weekend Viet Nam development, the South Vietnamese government announced plans to name a 100-member committee to carry out its pledge of national elections. Ten thousand Roman Catholics staged an orderly Sunday demonstration in Saigon in a show of strength.

In India, the second train bombing in a week in rebel-ridden Assam State killed 39 persons and injured more than 65 at Diphu village in the jungled Mikir Hills. Naga tribesmen were blamed. The blast, third in two months, brought to 133 the number of persons killed in such explosions.

The Soviet Union has promised aid to the new leftist regime in Syria to build a huge dam on the biblical Euphrates River. The move could become another Soviet propaganda bonanza in the Middle East, much like the Aswan Dam in Egypt.

The Gemini 9 pilots outlined how they plan to simulate three rendezvous maneuvers on their three-day flight starting May 17 from Cape Kennedy. Air Force Lt. Col. Thomas P. Stafford is the command pilot with Navy Lt. Cmdr. Eugene A. Cernan his companion. Cernan is scheduled to make a 2-hour-25-minute space walk.

The Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee said "the reluctance of the Department of Defense to invest in nuclear-powered surface warships" poses a threat to the nation's security. It urged Congress "to be alert to assure the reluctance . . . does not cause our Navy to lapse into obsolescence."

The forerunner of the American magazine was the almanac. In the 18th and 19th centuries in the United States there were about 2,000 almanacs printed for various trades, organizations, businesses, military and religious groups and finally as an advertising medium. The most famous was Benjamin Franklin's "Poor Richard's Almanac;" the most popular was the "Astronomical Diary and Almanac" with an annual circulation of 60,000 copies.

French Charge NATO Military Command Is Now out of Date

PARIS AP -- Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville says France is quitting the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's military command because it is out of date, but it doesn't want its friendship with the United States to diminish.

"In the nuclear era, this organization does not deal with the essential element of defense which is nuclear defense," Couve de Murville said. "France does not seek a special advantage. She is adopting herself to a new situation and this can only have advantages for the equilibrium and peace in Europe."

NEW YORK (AP) — Work addicts are urged to take a work break instead of just relying on more coffee.

The neurotic ways of the business executive who thinks the company can't function without him are coming under closer inspection by both physicians and corporate management.

The doctors worry about the social and personal problems that can build up from executive tensions. These sometimes lead to mental or physical breakdowns.

Management is worrying about what tension in the executive suite may be doing to employe morale. Also there is the pressing problem of how growing tension may affect the making of crucial dollar and cents decisions.

Like drug, alcohol and gambling addicts, the one who is being hooked by his work and by his preoccupation with it is usually the last to recognize his trouble or to admit his addiction. Instead, he develops all kinds of physical symptoms that physicians find hard to trace to physical causes.

"Executive behavior of practrace to physical causes.

"Excessive behavior of practically any kind begets addiction," says Dr. Nelson Bradley of the Parkside Clinic, Des Plaines, Ill. "For the drinker, anything above the one or two drinks necessary to gain the relaxation he legitimately may seek is excessive behavior. In the case of the executive and his workload, I believe that anything over a 40-hour work week is excessive behavior, particularly in this day of good corporation organization and extremely competent subordinates."

The work addict will plead a rush of demands, Dr. Bradley says, when "the events leading to the rush have actually been instigated by the man himself."

Dr. William C. Menninger, founder of the Menninger Clinic of Industrial Mental Health, urges that in addition to regular physical examinations for key men, companies also provide regular emotional checkups for their executives.

"It is rare for anyone to see his physician because of tension, but physicians' offices are filled with patients who complain of symptoms resulting from tensions," notes Dr. Theodore G. Klumpp, president of Winthrop Laboratories, a division of Sterling Drug.

He holds that a certain amount of stress, different for each person, is a powerful spur to creativity or productivity. But the extremes of stress, from either intensity or duration, are harmful. Tensions are revealed in nervousness or sleeplessness, diarrhea, spastic colitis, loss of weight or gaining of too much weight too fast.

If you're becoming a work addict, he suggests a work break. And for most executives the best work break is a regular program of physical exercise.

Pushups won't do, Dr. Klumpp contends. Nor will walking, swimming, golf, tennis or bicycling — if done only on Sunday. The work break has to be taken every day. And above all beware of that common advice to "take it easy."

Don't worry about physical strain, the doctor and drug company executive adds. It's not a "fulfilling, rewarding life to be afraid to live for fear of dying."

Mrs. Steward Is Hostess to Extension Club

The home of Mrs. Fred Steward was the meeting place of the Sikeston Extension Club Monday, April 18.

The meeting was presided over by President Malcolm. She reminded the members of the club's annual bus trip to St. Louis and the Spring Activity to be May 4 at 1:30 p.m. in the community room of the Security National Bank. The theme will be "The Circus, Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow." Earl Allen will provide entertainment.

After the business meeting, a social hour was enjoyed as Mrs. Steward and co-hostess, Mrs. O. C. Lewis served 15 members and two guests samples of the quick meal which they prepared during the club meeting. "Quick Meals" was also the lesson for the April meeting.

Mrs. A. J. Heuiser and Mrs. J. N. Walker were guests of the club and Mrs. Heuiser decided to become a member of the club. The club also welcomed back Mrs. Harry Buckles who has been away several months in Texas.

HEARNES CITES NEED FOR MORE STATE ACTION

"The object of this administration has been to interpose Jefferson City between the state and the federal government," Gov. Warren E. Hearnes said last week.

The federal government has stepped in with the grant-in-aid programs to meet needs where the state governments have failed to act, Hearnes said.

During the current special session of the legislature, several members of the Senate have decried state government in Missouri for jumping at federal funds when matching funds were required. One bill in contention provided for improvement of scenic beauty along federal highways with a $3 million bonus involved.

Hearnes pointed out that people no longer are taking anything and everything because federal funds are involved. There are many areas in which federal assistance is necessary, he said, but we are scrutinizing grant-in-aid programs more carefully as to their actual benefit to the state's needs.

On the other hand, the state cannot fail to meet its responsibilities, he said. He implied that if the Legislature does not want more federal intervention, it must take over areas where the need arises to prevent such intervention.

One department which Hearnes created when he took office to meet rapid state growth and keep ahead of federal programs was that of Community Affairs, formerly known as Urban Affairs. The name was changed since many people misinterpreted the function of the department -- that is, to aid state-wide development of all communities.

The Department of Community Affairs, headed by Phil Maher, presently is administering programs of the Office of Economic Opportunity and is laying the groundwork for statewide developmental planning.

A bill in this special session would set up a state planning bureau which would assume some of the duties of the Commerce and Industrial Commission and other state divisions in providing a comprehensive plan for transportation, communications and industrial development throughout the state.

The immediate goals of the bill are to take advantage of federal water and sewer district legislation which requires such a state department to administer water and sewer program funds to small communities and rural areas.

As far as the long- range changes in the administrative divisions and initiation of a planning program, Hearnes said the state will have to "travel slowly." Once a state agency has been established, he said, the officials involved are reluctant to make changes which would relinquish some of their power and responsibilities.

Whether this planning bill will be passed or not by this special session, some planning program must be initiated in the future, Hearnes said.

He is confident that some of the provisions of the bill will be approved, but realizes that some legislation will not be passed for lack of time.

"You can't compare a special with a regular session of the Legislature," he said. "It is difficult for the members to adapt to the 60-day session."

As a result, many bills do not receive attention. After all, he said, the primary function of this session was approval of the budget for next year, and most of the other bills proposed were special interest measures requested by various state or local agencies.

Despite this fact, it is apparent that many measures will be approved, including billboard regulations, a medicare proposal supplementing the federal program and a bill providing for handling of stolen goods, recommended by the Jackson County prosecuting attorney.

SUPREME COURT OPENS HEAVY APRIL SESSION

The Missouri Supreme Court opened its April session Monday with a total of 82 civil cases and 30 criminal cases on the docket.

Chief Justice Clem F. Storckman said that 15 of these will be heard "en blanc," that is, by all seven justices, while the remaining cases will be heard by Divisions One and Two, with only three judges sitting in each division.

The Court is operating under a new system for this session, for in the past, four judges, including the Chief Justice, have been sitting with Division One, and three judges sat with Division Two.

There is no difference between the types of cases handled by the two divisions, Storckman said, but only three judges will sit in each division this time, allowing him more time to handle the administrative duties which become greater each year for the Chief Justice.

To meet the demands of a large docket, five judges have been called in from throughout the state to sit with each division and reduce the number of cases decided by each justice.

Under the 1945 Missouri Constitution, the Court was allowed to name judges from other courts, or retired Supreme Court judges, as special commissioners to hear Supreme Court cases.

Chief Justice Storckman will continue to hear some cases, but will only sit with one or two divisions when a case assigned to him is to be heard. By adjusting this work load, Storckman said the Chief Justice should have about 30 extra working days a year to handle administrative matters.

HEARNES CITES NEED FOR MORE STATE ACTION

"The object of this administration has been to interpose Jefferson City between the state and the federal government," Gov. Warren E. Hearnes said last week.

The federal government has stepped in with the grant-in-aid programs to meet needs where the state governments have failed to act, Hearnes said.

During the current special session of the legislature, several members of the Senate have decried state government in Missouri for jumping at federal funds when matching funds were required. One bill in contention provided for improvement of scenic beauty along federal highways with a $3 million bonus involved.

Hearnes pointed out that people no longer are taking anything and everything because federal funds are involved. There are many areas in which federal assistance is necessary, he said, but we are scrutinizing grant-in-aid programs more carefully as to their actual benefit to the state's needs.

On the other hand, the state cannot fail to meet its responsibilities, he said. He implied that if the Legislature does not want more federal intervention, it must take over areas where the need arises to prevent such intervention.

One department which Hearnes created when he took office to meet rapid state growth and keep ahead of federal programs was that of Community Affairs, formerly known as Urban Affairs. The name was changed since many people misinterpreted the function of the department -- that is, to aid state-wide development of all communities.

The Department of Community Affairs, headed by Phil Maher, presently is administering programs of the Office of Economic Opportunity and is laying the groundwork for statewide developmental planning.

A bill in this special session would set up a state planning bureau which would assume some of the duties of the Commerce and Industrial Commission and other state divisions in providing a comprehensive plan for transportation, communications and industrial development throughout the state.

The immediate goals of the bill are to take advantage of federal water and sewer district legislation which requires such a state department to administer water and sewer program funds to small communities and rural areas.

As far as the long- range changes in the administrative divisions and initiation of a planning program, Hearnes said the state will have to "travel slowly." Once a state agency has been established, he said, the officials involved are reluctant to make changes which would relinquish some of their power and responsibilities.

Whether this planning bill will be passed or not by this special session, some planning program must be initiated in the future, Hearnes said.

He is confident that some of the provisions of the bill will be approved, but realizes that some legislation will not be passed for lack of time.

"You can't compare a special with a regular session of the Legislature," he said. "It is difficult for the members to adapt to the 60-day session."

As a result, many bills do not receive attention. After all, he said, the primary function of this session was approval of the budget for next year, and most of the other bills proposed were special interest measures requested by various state or local agencies.

Despite this fact, it is apparent that many measures will be approved, including billboard regulations, a medicare proposal supplementing the federal program and a bill providing for handling of stolen goods, recommended by the Jackson County prosecuting attorney.

SUPREME COURT OPENS HEAVY APRIL SESSION

The Missouri Supreme Court opened its April session Monday with a total of 82 civil cases and 30 criminal cases on the docket.

Chief Justice Clem F. Storckman said that 15 of these will be heard "en blanc," that is, by all seven justices, while the remaining cases will be heard by Divisions One and Two, with only three judges sitting in each division.

The Court is operating under a new system for this session, for in the past, four judges, including the Chief Justice, have been sitting with Division One, and three judges sat with Division Two.

There is no difference between the types of cases handled by the two divisions, Storckman said, but only three judges will sit in each division this time, allowing him more time to handle the administrative duties which become greater each year for the Chief Justice.

To meet the demands of a large docket, five judges have been called in from throughout the state to sit with each division and reduce the number of cases decided by each justice.

Under the 1945 Missouri Constitution, the Court was allowed to name judges from other courts, or retired Supreme Court judges, as special commissioners to hear Supreme Court cases.

Chief Justice Storckman will continue to hear some cases, but will only sit with one or two divisions when a case assigned to him is to be heard. By adjusting this work load, Storckman said the Chief Justice should have about 30 extra working days a year to handle administrative matters.

Coverage of Viet Nam War Costly in Lives and Money

NEW YORK AP - The Associated Press Board of Directors said in its annual report today that the cost of covering the war in Viet Nam has been heavy, both in casualties and financial expenses.

"During the year two Associated Press men were killed," the board said. "Four others have been wounded in Viet Nam. Due to escalation of the war, it was necessary to more than double the size of the staff there." The report, read at the annual AP meeting, said:

"The year was marked, too, by an increasing flood of news from Washington and greatly expanded government actions in all news fields.

The quick shifts in news emphasis and the need for experience in writing for an increasinglyly sophisticated public, call for new methods of handling news. The Associated Press now has special task forces available for major news developments."

The AP meeting, in addition to hearing the report, voted to fill seven vacancies on the 18-member board of directors and acted on the applications of 29 associate newspaper members to become regular members of the AP, whose news report reaches 900 million people around the world.

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey was the guest speaker at the AP luncheon after the business meeting.

Paul Miller, president of The Associated Press and president of Gannett newspapers, presided at the meeting and luncheon.

Wes Gallagher, general manager of The Associated Press, reported to the news executives on the activities of the cooperative news gathering association during the past year.

Other highlights of the meeting were personal reports in depth from Viet Nam and the Dominican Republic.

The directors, commenting on the new task forces, added: "One is a staff of experienced space and science writers assigned to the major space flights --there are more of these every year.

"A second task force, formed this past year consists of specialists in covering racial developments. These staff men, normally working in various bureaus around the country, converge on any area where their experience will be helpful.

"A third mobile emergency force is ready for assignment to enterprise projects connected with the spot news report.

"One of the year's major developments was the complete reorganization of the Wirephoto network to remove state barriers and to permit movement of the best quality pictures across state lines on a regional basis.

"In the first major change in Wirephoto routing since the network was established more than 30 years ago, there are now regional control bureaus in eight cities outside of New York-Chicago, Atlanta, Dallas, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Boston, Philadelphia, and Washington."

The directors said the progress of AP operations generally has been reflected by the greatest gains in newspaper membership since World War II. Twenty-eight daily newspapers in the United States came into Associated Press membership in 1965, and 19 more have applied for membership so far in 1966. There currently are 1,226 daily newspaper members in the United States.

Broadcast membership, the board said, is now at 2,828 and there are 4,515 subscribers to Associated Press service abroad in 103 countries and territories. The report added:

"The gains in the United States were more than matched in Latin America, which was the area of greatest growth in the world services in 1965.

"And since the first of the year has come another important development -- establishment of a local state-wire service in Puerto Rico. There are both English a Spanish - language circu' serving 28 newspapers ar broadcasters throughout P rto Rico, with the AP staf. ased in San Juan."

The report noted that the war in Viet Nam dominated the news of 1965 for the second straight year.

"The situation with respect to restrictions on coverage of the war in Viet Nam, which was deplored in our report a year ago, has eased," the board said. "As of today," correspondents and photographers find fewer difficulties placed in their way than earlier in the war.

"In Indonesia, American news agency offices were closed in January and correspondents expelled," the report said. "In late March they were permitted to return and we are now re-established there with Jeff Williams being sent from Tokyo to be correspondent at Jakarta."

The board said the fixed assets purchased in 1965 amounted to $1,547,560.34, all paid from funds of the corporation.

These technical advances were listed by the board:

"Automatic Wirephoto has proved to be an outstanding success. One of the first machines was displayed at our meeting here just a year ago. Since then more than 150 members in the United States, Canada and Europe have signed for this automatic delivery of glossy photographic prints, and practically all of the installations have been made.

"A spectacular new use of computers to provide baseball box scores has been instituted. The elaborate Associated Press play-by-play baseball services, reaching into every major league park in the United States, are coded and fed into AP computers, providing complete side-by-side box scores in tape within a minute or so after the end of the game. This gain of around 30 minutes on the average enables editors to make editions which they never could make before.

"Production will start soon o' 'AP Offsetter,' a machine to be connected directly to AP Teletypesetter circuits and produce in justified lines on printers copy for offset reproduction.

Friendship Garden

Mother has a green thumb
For flowers and people too.
She has a friendship garden
And one of flowering rue.

There is a time for everything
She says and seems to know
When to tender her affection
And when to let things go.

For the rhythm of all growing things
Like flowers and you and I
Is an alternate attention
And a silent standing by.

A friendship must grow slowly
Nor the flower plucked anon.
When it's time the bud will open
And the shyness will be gone.

In friendship garden mother works
As with her flowering rue.
She says it makes her fit to be
A friend and have one too.

And every flower that blossoms there
Begging Nature's pardon
Seems to have its human counterpart
In mother's friendship garden.

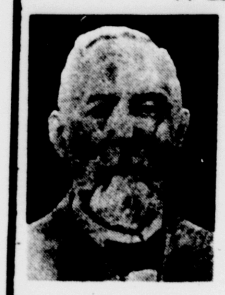
When I Was A Boy



B.F. "Pappy" Blanton

As compiled by Ralph Gregory, Curator of the Mark Twain Shrine, Florida, from the writings of the founder of the Appeal, B. F. "Pappy" Blanton, in 1919-20. A contemporary of Mark Twain, "Pappy" Blanton wrote of the times and customs that were so dear to Twain, and about which Twain wrote so many interesting and humorous anecdotes.

(Verbatim copy, with some questions and guesses as to missing words)

September 10, 1920

When I was a boy, nearly all of the wool hats, or large part of them, worn by men in Central Missouri, were made in Columbia by a man named Ashlock, who has been dead and forgotten for more than half a century and I have an idea that many people now living in Columbia do not know that at one time there was a hat factory in their town. But there was. Those Ashlock hats would last almost a lifetime. They were made entirely of wool, before shoddy was heard of in this country. They were sold in many parts of Missouri but the demand for something nicer and better looking finally drove them out of the trade. Or it may be that he could not compete with the eastern factories, any more than could the small town plow and wagon makers.

When I was a boy there were many thousands of Negro slaves in Missouri. These Negroes, as a general thing were well clothed and well fed and if they got sick the family physician was called in. The average owner of slaves rarely whipped them, but there were exceptions to this rule. I happen to remember two very brutal men who owned a lot of Negroes. One of these men belonged to one of the very best families in Boone county but when he got drunk he beat every Negro he could see when he got home and there is no doubt that he killed two of his Negroes. The other brutal master lived in Howard county and was supposed to be a very religious man. I am convinced that slavery was never a paying proposition in this state for by the manner in which farming was then done they never raised but little more than enough to clothe and feed themselves. I remember hearing a man say that they were "a mighty good shade in the summer and a mighty good fire in the winter."

When I was a boy we had very few conveniences and no luxuries, as I have before remarked, but lived just as happy and much more contented than people do today. Then we fought the flies with brushes made of peacock feather. Now we have screens and fly swatters. Nobody had ever seen or heard of a wrist watch. There were no white shoes or silk stockings. There were no pictures of girls or women almost naked in the newspapers as there are today. Nobody had appendicitis. Spraying orchards had never been thought of. Farmers went to town after their mail. There were no autos, or flying machines, no steel ships, telephones or telegraph. Then farmers burned their straw stacks. There were no anarchists, no I. W. W. organization to overthrow the government, no sewing machines, no safety razors and no dudes. County papers cost you $2 a year and were mighty common compared to the county paper of today. But there was not as much crime in the entire state in a year as is committed in any one of our larger cities in a month.

When I was a boy most all of the wagons, buggies and plows all over this part of the state were made by mechanics in the small towns, (they were all small towns then). Every town had its wagon shop where real, honest - to - goodness wagons were made, and in these same towns many plows were made. When the great eastern factories with their machine equipped plants began to ship in wagons and plows, they drove the small mechanic out of business as hand labor could not compete with machine made articles, so the industry died. It may interest some of my readers to know that 60 years ago, there was made in the village of Middle Grove, this county, hundreds of plows that were sold all over Monroe, Randolph, Boone, and Howard counties, and they were good plows too. I know, for I have plowed many a day with one of them.

'Fidler' Hit in West

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD AP -- Harold Prince paced the floor of his Beverly Hills Hotel bungalow and sputed ideas, as a hard-driving, highly successful Broadway producer should.

Prince was here to launch the road company of his "Fiddler on the Roof," which began a sold-out seven weeks at the Music Center after a week in San Diego.

"We played in San Diego to audiences of gentiles, and they loved it," he remarked. The musical concerns village life of Russian Jews. "Too bad we can only play seven weeks here. It could go on for seven months.

"The Shuberts swear that 'Fiddler' can go on at least seven years in New York. Imagine! The show has all the aspects of a classic, and that's something new for me. Even with 'West Side Story' we didn't sell out for the first few weeks, and there was no question of whether it would go at all.

"They're after me now to put together another 'Fiddler' company to take care of the cities that this one can't make. I'm resisting. It's not easy show to put together. But I'll probably give in.

"They said it was Zero Mostel's show and anybody would be crazy to follow him. But Luther Adler did, and he succeeded.

Now Herschel Bernardi is playing it in New York, and he's fine. It's not any one star's show. It's a classic."

Prince, who produced "Damn Yankees," "Pajama Game" and "Fiorello" among others, retains his boyish enthusiasm for the theater. That seems to be what it takes, since you can't succeed in the Broadway rat-race without really trying.

The trade knows that Prince tried hard with "It's a Bird... It's a Plane ... It's Superman," which opened recently to what is generally called mixed reviews. Despite the yawns of some critics, Prince says the show is a solid hit.

Other Prince ideas:

A musical called "Cabaret" for next season, based on Christopher Isherwood's "I am a Camera" stories of 1930 Berlin.

A movie, "The Cook," all about eating, which Prince himself would direct.

"Old Kinderhook"

The term "O.K." is said by authorities to come from the initials for "Old Kinderhook," a nickname for Martin Van Buren taken from the name of the New York village where he was born. It was used as a political rallying cry when he ran for the presidency in 1840, according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

'Fidler' Hit in West

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD AP -- Harold Prince paced the floor of his Beverly Hills Hotel bungalow and sputed ideas, as a hard-driving, highly successful Broadway producer should.

Prince was here to launch the road company of his "Fiddler on the Roof," which began a sold-out seven weeks at the Music Center after a week in San Diego.

"We played in San Diego to audiences of gentiles, and they loved it," he remarked. The musical concerns village life of Russian Jews. "Too bad we can only play seven weeks here. It could go on for seven months.

"The Shuberts swear that 'Fiddler' can go on at least seven years in New York. Imagine! The show has all the aspects of a classic, and that's something new for me. Even with 'West Side Story' we didn't sell out for the first few weeks, and there was no question of whether it would go at all.

"They're after me now to put together another 'Fiddler' company to take care of the cities that this one can't make. I'm resisting. It's not easy show to put together. But I'll probably give in.

"They said it was Zero Mostel's show and anybody would be crazy to follow him. But Luther Adler did, and he succeeded.

Now Herschel Bernardi is playing it in New York, and he's fine. It's not any one star's show. It's a classic."

Prince, who produced "Damn Yankees," "Pajama Game" and "Fiorello" among others, retains his boyish enthusiasm for the theater. That seems to be what it takes, since you can't succeed in the Broadway rat-race without really trying.

The trade knows that Prince tried hard with "It's a Bird. . . It's a Plane . . . It's Superman," which opened recently to what is generally called mixed reviews. Despite the yawns of some critics, Prince says the show is a solid hit.

Other Prince ideas:

A musical called "Cabaret" for next season, based on Christopher Isherwood's "I am a Camera" stories of 1930 Berlin.

A movie, "The Cook," all about eating, which Prince himself would direct.

"Old Kinderhook"

The term "O.K." is said by authorities to come from the initials for "Old Kinderhook," a nickname for Martin Van Buren taken from the name of the New York village where he was born. It was used as a political rallying cry when he ran for the presidency in 1840, according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

ARTICLE #8

One of my earliest memories is of Saturday afternoon movies. I would make a special effort to see the name of the movie advertised on the Marquee', or find it listed in the STANDARD, although I knew exactly what was playing from the previews of the previous week.

All my gang had their favorite "cowboys" and used to assume their identities during our weekly games, so that it was not at all unusual to have Gene Autry shooting at Roy Rogers, with Hopalong Casidy and the Durango Kid choosing sides. My favorite was Johnny Mack Brown, because I liked to hear him say "Shayriff" for Sheriff. Also, he would never mess around singing mushy love songs like Roy Rogers or Gene Autry. He was all shooting and fighting and "Shariffing" through the whole show. Of course, a Roy Rogers song gave me the opportunity to run out to the lobby for a drink of water to wash away the salt from the popcorn. I would always make sure Mr. Decker saw me coming from inside the movie though, so I wouldn't have to buy another ticket.

Sikeston is probably the only place in the world where you don't get half of your ticket back. When I first left home, I used to exasperate the ticket takers by walking off and leaving him twisting a ticket in mid-air, rather than holding half and letting him tear it off. Now, when I come home, it is just the reverse. Mr. Decker, (the same one who used to watch me drink water), and I both stand for a second holding onto the same ticket until I realize that I am back home again.

Now all this rambling through the past may seem to be out of place in an article about Viet Nam, but I had occasion to recall these incidents out of my childhood recently, when I found out that we were going to have a movie.

For more than fifty days now, the troops of this company have put in 14 hours days, 7 days a week. This is not particularly unusual over here, and actually, the morale has remained very high. It is obvious that the work has to be done, and the results can be clearly seen. Never-theless, it becomes accumulative, and you need relaxation more than you think. Therefore, we decided to try and secure a projector, so that we could get on distribution for the 16mm films that are floating around Viet Nam. Just securing the projector was in itself quite an accomplishment! But I would rather not divulge exactly how it was done at this time.

Once we had the projector, we were a few days getting the film, but the very fact that we had a projector was like money in the bank. Men would come from the flight-line, soaking wet with sweat from working on the aircraft, and walk by the projector in anticipation of the coming movies.

Then at last, we got a film. We didn't receive it in time to check it out before the performance though, and it was almost totally ruined. All of the sprocket guides on the film were stripped, and it wouldn't feed through the projector. The disappointment was acute, but the men comforted themselves with the knowledge that within a few days they would have another film.

Then the chance came again. The film was checked and was O.K. and the men gathered for the movie. Disaster struck again! The shaft on the take-up pulley snapped, and the projector wouldn't work.

The next day, we tried to equate the intricacies of helicopter maintenance, the projector maintenance, and finally a Jerry rigged contraption made the machine operate again.

Night came and we prepared once again to view the film. The men congregated around the back of a parts trailer where a sheet had been tacked up, and we were ready to begin! Suddenly, BRAACK, WHUMP! Incoming mortar fire! Even though the rounds were aimed for the flight line and the ships parked there, and not for us, we still had to run to the sandbag barricades, and must await the all-clear. By the time it was sounded, it was too late to show the movie. We had had the projector now for six days, and still no movie.

Finally night fell again, and once again we gathered to watch that movie. Charlie's mortars had been silenced, the film was good, and the projector worked. Along the perimenter, we could see tracers arching through the sky. We could hear in the distance the steady whump, whump, of artillery, and overhead, the sonic boom of 8 inch shells going through sound barrier, as they sped to distant targets. But on the screen was our movie!

matter of Fact

Only about one-third of the world's population has an adequate food supply. In underdeveloped areas the deficiencies, such as undernutrition, protein malnutrition, anemia and beriberi, are predominant. But in regions in which food supplies are abundant and economic levels high, overnutrition, such as obesity, is the problem.

ANN LANDERS

Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: Why should the color of a woman's hair be so important to a husband that he would walk out of the house and not talk to her for two days?

I am 43 and look it. My husband is a youthful 44. My hairdresser suggested that I lighten my hair a few shades -- just enough to tone the gray down and give the appearance of being blonde. I don't mean a brassy blond -- I mean a nice, soft, honey color.

I was thrilled when I left the beauty shop. Everyone in the place raved. I felt 15 years younger. When my teen-agers came home they told me right off that they didn't like it. Teen-agers never like the way their mother looks so I discounted their remarks. But when my husband saw me he went through the roof. He said I looked like a streetwalker and added a few other comments.

I like my hair this way but I'm wondering if it's worth all this fighting. My husband insists he'll never get used to it and that I should switch back to natural. What would YOU do, Ann Landers? -- MINORITY OF ONE.

Dear Min: I'd rather switch than fight.

Dear Ann Landers: I hope you will publish this letter for the benefit of the 15-year-old girl who was caught sneaking her mother's car. She asked you to intervene in her behalf and you refused.

We, too, had a 15-year-old daughter who couldn't wait until she was given permission to drive. She had had some classroom instruction and it was only a matter of weeks before she would have been granted the permission that she so eagerly desired. But she just couldn't wait. She borrowed a car from a girl friend and nobody knows for sure exactly what happened.

When the police called us they could only say our darling daughter had smashed into a concrete bridge, the car had turned over in a ditch, and she was drowned in less than three feet of water.

What a horrible price our little girl paid for her mistake. The teen-ager who wrote to you should take her punishment and thank God she got off so lucky. -- MRS. M. J.

Dear Mrs. M.J.: Thanks for a letter which I'm sure was extremely difficult to write. But it was worth the effort, mother, take my word for it. Millions of teen-agers read this column and (hopefully) learn from it. You gave every high school student who ever "borrowed" his parents' car something to think about.

Dear Ann Landers: Due to illness I am just now getting around to acknowledging the cards we received at Christmas time. I have a whole stack of cards I can't acknowledge because I don't know who sent them.

The signatures read, "Jim and Alice," "Betty and Bill", and "Lois and Dick." We know several couples who have these names. The envelopes have been thrown away so there is no city to clue me.

This may not be a timely letter but it would surely be a national service if you'd remind people to put their last names on their Christmas cards and not assume that they are the only Ron and Beth in the whole world. ----TIRED

Dear Tired: A good letter is ALWAYS timely. Thanks for writing.

Liquor can ruin your mind, your body and your life. To learn the booby traps of teen-age drinking, write for Ann Landers' booklet, "Teen-age Drinking," enclosing with your request 20¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

The Facts About T.V.A.

THE army engineers estimated that possible damages from floods on the Tennessee River could not exceed $2.25 million in any one year, yet the annual interest charges on the $153 million charged off by TVA to flood control up to 1947 amount to about $3.5 million per year. So, yearly interest costs the taxpayers at least fifty percent more a year than the maximum of flood damage would have cost.

Dr. Kershner

According to the Chicago Tribune, TVA's locks and canals on the Tennessee River to make possible the carrying of freight, cost $158 million up to 1958. If all of this freight had been shipped by rail and paid for by the federal government, the cost to the taxpayers would have been about one-third of the amount TVA spent to promote navigation on the Tennessee River.

TVA was sold to the American people as a means of promoting navigation and irrigation, and for flood control purposes. It was supposed to generate hydro-electric power as a by-product. Generating electricity in steam plants has long been its major drive, and now it is considering the use of nuclear power for that purpose. This shows the fraudulent nature of the original contention that the development of hydro-electric power was only a by-product of the TVA plan for flood control and the promoting of navigation and irrigation.

During the past fourteen years, our exports of manufactured goods have declined from a little more than 26% of the total exports of all countries to 20%. German exports, during the same period of time, have increased from about 8% of the total of all manufactured goods to 20%, and are just equal to that of the United States.

This is a remarkable record for a country only one-quarter the size of ours, and it shows what can be accomplished when the people of a country are willing to work hard and refrain from foot-dragging and feather-bedding practices. Germany has remained competitive and her goods sell throughout the world, while we have indulged in wage-push inflation to the point where we have lost a large part of our export markets. Concurrently, we have lost a large part of our domestic markets because foreign competitors are able to sell goods in our own country, over and above transportation costs and tariffs, at less than we can make and sell the same goods. To get our share of the world's trade, both at home and abroad, we must remain competitive. If our wage scales make that impossible, we are living in a fool's paradise.

I can do all things in him that strengthenth me.—(Phil 4:13)

We have time for everything we need to do today. When we take such a stand at the beginning of a day it sets the tone of the day and puts us in tune with the spirit of successful accomplishment. We have time for all that needs to be done—the energy and strength we need, the wisdom and the power of Spirit at our command.

Humphrey Sees Need For Double Victory

NEW YORK AP -- Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey said today peace in Asia depends on victory against "poverty, disease and despair" as well as against "the classic power tactics of communism" in Viet Nam.

"We must not lose the peace in either struggle," the vice president said in a speech prepared for the annual meeting of The Associated Press.

"That is why we have committed once more -- as we have had to do before -- men, money, and resources to help the nations of Asia help themselves toward security and independence," Humphrey added.

Cautioning that "it won't be easy, it will be frustrating and at times heartbreaking," Humphrey sazd:

"We must stay and see it through. And the free nations of the world need to know that we have the vision and the endurance to do so.

"Those who threaten their neighbors in Asia should know it too. They should know that we will resist their aggression."

Humphrey, who returned two months ago from a nine-nation Asian tour, added, "They should also know that we bear no consumptive hate against their people, that we have no design on their sovereignty."

"We only look toward the day when all nations may choose to live in harmony with their neighbors -- when they may turn together their energies to building a better life for their peoples," he said. "For this is after all our second great task before us: the desperate need to narrow the widening gap between the rich and poor nations of the world."

Humphrey said that it is not possible to preserve lasting peace if glaring economic and social inequality among the peoples of the world exist.

Tying the hopes for peace to helping "the disinherited and left-out of this world," the vice president said:

"Today there are families spending their last day on earth because they haven't the strength or health to keep going.

"But those who remain --and you can be sure of this -- those who remain will take to the streets . . . they will turn to any master . . . they will tear the fabric of peace to shreds, unless they have some reason to believe there is hope for life and hope for justice.

Humphrey then tied this idea to President Johnson's foreign aid request now before Congress and said, "We hear the same doubts and complaints today that we heard 20 years ago."

"If someone has a substitute for foreign aid, I'd like to hear about it," he said. "The investment we make in foreign aid -- in preventive medicine, if you will -- is certainly less than that necessary to treat the sumptoms of massive economic crisis and disorder and, yes, of war."

But Humphrey said leadership in the world requires "far more than a large stock of gunboats and a hard fist at the conference table" or the ability to go it alone, "although we must not be afraid to do so when necessary."

"Leadership today requires understanding of the problems we face -- of the resources at hand -- and of the objectives we seek," Humphrey said.

"It requires the ability, perhaps even more, to lead and inspire others -- to lead and inspire in a sense of common enterprise.

"For as strong and rich as we may become, our goal of a just and peaceful world will never be achieved by America alone," Humphrey said.

"it will be achieved only when the resources of strong and week, rich and poor alike are allocated in the most efficient manner possible, to challenges that are far too great for any one nation or group of nations to overcome."

Clay Pigeon "Trap"

The device used in propelling clay pigeons got the name of "trap" from the fact that the original trapshooters placed live birds in a series of traps. On signal, the operator of the traps pulled a cord, liberating the birds as targets for the shooters.

Dear Sir:

The elected Authorities in Washington piously declaim that the United States is a nation of 'law' while cowardly submitting to rule by bureaucratic 'guidelines'. When will Congress rouse itself to control and regulate the agencies it has spawned??

The HEW guidelines have determined that all schools, hospitals and other facilities must have racial balance of white and colored to be eligible for the Federal funds approved for them by Congress. This follows neither the letter or the intent of the law and the Congress and the President know it.

What possible excuse can Congress have for abdicating its authority and allowing dictatorial rule by 'guidelines'??

Congressman George Grider has stated that it was not the intention of Congress to involuntarily force integration and Vice President Humphrey, when urging the Senate to vote for passage of the Civil-Rights law, stated:

"The bill does not attempt to integrate the schools, but it does attempt to eliminate segregation in the school systems. The fact that there is racial imbalance present is not something which is unconstitutional".

The U.S. Office of Health Education and Welfare is directly violating principles of the 1964 Civil-Rights law and of court decisions that hold that no government action can be taken to obtain racial balance in schools and hospitals.

Bureaucratic guidelines could possibly be helpful; but tied to illegal penalties, are obnoxious and have the stink of dictatorship.

To the Editor and the Fair-minded Citizens of Sikeston:

We, of the Scott Central R-5 school district, wish to appeal to the voters of Sikeston to help us keep our school for our children. We have nothing against Sikeston, but we are proud of our school just as all people should be of theirs. Many of us shop in your stores, bank in your banks, and attend your churches.

We wish you to know that we feel we have been treated very badly by the majority of our own Board of Education. Without our knowledge, they approached the Sikeston Board of Education, telling them that we wished to consolidate with Sikeston. They then went to the Scott County School board and told them that this was the wish of our district. This plan was sent to the State Board saying we wanted to consolidate with the Sikeston system. The state board approved the plan, and the election date was set for May 3. All of this was done without holding one meeting with the parents of our district. The County Board says these meetings were supposed to have been held. They also said we had been represented by the president of our Board of Education and by our school superintendent. Now I ask you: CAN ONE BE REPRESENTED ON A MATTER OF WHICH THEY KNOW NOTHING? We feel that we should have been allowed to vote for or against annexation, then if the majority voted in favor for it, then Sikeston could vote whether or not they want us. This way, we have had no choice in the matter, and will not have any unless you people of Sikeston help us. Therefore, we are pleading with you: VOTE "NO" ON MAY 3 AND HELP US TO KEEP OUR SCHOOL.

Several children, to come to Sikeston, would have to ride 20 miles or more and much of this over gravel roads. During the winter, the roads sometimes become hazardous. If the bus could not run, and Sikeston should continue to have school, then our pupils would have to miss school.

Several of our children, especially those from larger families, feel that they cannot dress as well as many of the children in Sikeston, will be unable to attend school activities due to being so far away, cannot be in the band since practice is so early in the morning, and many cannot pay the entry fee of $22 and $26. Therefore, if we do consolidate, about 50 pupils will drop out of school.

We feel that a pupil gets out of school just what he puts into it. We have pupils graduating from different colleges with high honors, including Columbia University and Rolla School of Mines. These people must have received a good foundation in our school.

In a 3 page article given out from door and handed out at your P.T.A., the main concern seemed to be what annexation would do for Sikeston financially. We help Sikeston financially already, by bringing them our business. If you will show your appreciation for our business by voting "NO" on May 3, we hope to continue doing business with you.

Matthews PTA Has Officers Installation

The Matthews elementary school P.T.A. held its final meeting of the school year Tuesday. The meeting was called to order by President Launius. Invocation was given by Rev. Blackard.

The secretary's report was given by Mrs. Jean Jewell. Room count was taken with Mrs. Solomon's sixth grade winning first place and Mrs. Wilson's sixth grade winning second.

Principal Mays announced that first grade pre-enrollment will be Friday, May 13. Move-up day for sixth graders will be May 12. Boy and girl week begins May 8. Open house will be May 17 and the last day of school is May 27.

Chief of Police Arthur Bruce gave the awards to the school safety patrol.

Following the installation of next year's officers by Clem Beal, he spoke on the reorganization proposal. This proposal will be voted on May 3.

After the meeting was adjourned, refreshments were served.

American Legion Auxiliary Meets With Mrs. York

Henry Meldrum Unit #114, American Legion Auxiliary, met Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Bill York, with president Mrs. Fred Tope, Jr., presiding.

The secretary's and treasurer's reports were accepted as read.

A letter from the Veterans Hospital, Poplar Bluff, was read in which they thanked the Unit for the numerous paper-backed books sent for use of the patients. The president also announced several aprons had been sent the hospital for the men to give for Mother's Day, May 8. She had another box of aprons to send for the same use. Twenty-five "Lap Robes" were sent the hospital recently too, Mrs. Tanner Dye reported.

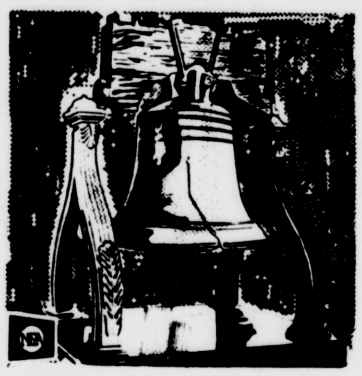
A note of thanks from the Business and Professional Women's Club was read for the Unit's participation in the Woman of the Year Project. The president reported she had received a request from a service man in Viet Nam for his local newspaper. Since he was from Lilbourn, she contacted the newspaper there and Bill Tope. A Sunday school class will send the Lilbourn newspaper to the service man.

Discussion was held concerning the project of the 14th District President of the American Legion Auxiliary which is the purchase of a record player for Talking Books for patients who for physical or visual reasons can not read at the Veterans Hospital. The unit voted to contribute $25 toward the project. Several years ago the local auxiliary unit purchased this same type of record player for the Veterans Hospital, but it needs replacing.

Mrs. Tanner Dye reported the women are still quilting each Wednesday at the American Lwgion Hall. However, they can always use more workers.

Girls State chairman reported the 10 applications for 10 girls to attend the 25th session of Girls State in June had been accepted. The girls now have their applications and are to return them to the chairman by May 5. A series of meetings will be held prior to the girls leaving for Columbia.

There being no further business the meeting was adjourned to a social hour with the hostess serving coffee, punch and cookies.



In 1775, the population of Philadelphia was 40,000. By that time Philadelphia was the largest city in the colonies by approximately 15,000 persons and in size was probably ranked second only to London among the cities of the British empire. It had tripled in size since 1740.

How to Display The U.S. Flag

Senators and Governors Endorse Flag-flying Efforts of U. S. Newspapers

Hiram L. Fong, U. S. Senator from Hawaii:

The American flag is the national symbol of our independence and unity. We should proudly fly it on all appropriate occasions, especially on our national holidays.

I congratulate The Daily Sikeston Standard for its patriotic public service in distributing American flags at cost to homeowners as a means of encouraging wider display of the flag on our national holidays.

John Tower, U. S. Senator from Texas:

With newspaper headlines depicting the crucial state of international affairs, every American is aware of the need for showing the world our nation is dedicated to its heritage of freedom. I would hope that every home can fly our flag on national holidays and I congratulate The Daily Sikeston Standard for its Patriotic public service in furthering this aim."

Wallace F. Bennett, U. S. Senator from Utah:

"I have long felt that the flying of the flag on national holidays is the least citizens can do to help remind themselves and others of our heritage and our good fortune to be living in the 'land of the free'... I congratulate The Daily Sikeston Standard for the public service in furthering this aim."

Thomas J. Dodd, U. S. Senator from Connecticut:

"With newspaper hearings depicting the difficult state of international affairs, every American is aware of the need for a united front to show the world our nation is dedicated to its heritage of freedom. I believe every home should fly our flag on national holidays, and I congratulate The Daily Sikeston Standard for its patriotic public service in furthering this aim."

Warren C. Magnuson, U. S. Senator from Washington:

"We cannot have too many American flags flying along our residential avenues on national holidays to remind ourselves as well as the world what it actually means to live in America and share its heritage. I congratulate The Daily Sikeston Standard for taking part in this effort."

QUICK QUIZ

Q—Why does "true blue" mean dependable or faithful?

A—"True blue" is said to go back to a superior quality blue dye manufactured in the Middle Ages in Coventry, England. Unlike other blue dyes, this one did not fade or run, so housewives began calling it the "true blue" dye.

American Legion Auxiliary Meets With Mrs. York

Henry Meldrum Unit #114, American Legion Auxiliary, met Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Bill York, with president Mrs. Fred Tope, Jr., presiding.

The secretary's and treasurer's reports were accepted as read.

A letter from the Veterans Hospital, Poplar Bluff, was read in which they thanked the Unit for the numerous paper-backed books sent for use of the patients. The president also announced several aprons had been sent the hospital for the men to give for Mother's Day, May 8. She had another box of aprons to send for the same use. Twenty-five "Lap Robes" were sent the hospital recently too, Mrs. Tanner Dye reported.

A note of thanks from the Business and Professional Women's Club was read for the Unit's participation in the Woman of the Year Project. The president reported she had received a request from a service man in Viet Nam for his local newspaper. Since he was from Lilbourn, she contacted the newspaper there and Bill Tope. A Sunday school class will send the Lilbourn newspaper to the service man.

Discussion was held concerning the project of the 14th District President of the American Legion Auxiliary which is the purchase of a record player for Talking Books for patients who for physical or visual reasons can not read at the Veterans Hospital. The unit voted to contribute $25 toward the project. Several years ago the local auxiliary unit purchased this same type of record player for the Veterans Hospital, but it needs replacing.

Mrs. Tanner Dye reported the women are still quilting each Wednesday at the American Lwgion Hall. However, they can always use more workers.

Girls State chairman reported the 10 applications for 10 girls to attend the 25th session of Girls State in June had been accepted. The girls now have their applications and are to return them to the chairman by May 5. A series of meetings will be held prior to the girls leaving for Columbia.

There being no further business the meeting was adjourned to a social hour with the hostess serving coffee, punch and cookies.

In 1775, the population of Philadelphia was 40,000. By that time Philadelphia was the largest city in the colonies by approximately 15,000 persons and in size was probably ranked second only to London among the cities of the British empire. It had tripled in size since 1740.

How to Display The U.S. Flag

Senators and Governors Endorse Flag-flying Efforts of U. S. Newspapers

Hiram L. Fong, U. S. Senator from Hawaii:

The American flag is the national symbol of our independence and unity. We should proudly fly it on all appropriate occasions, especially on our national holidays.

I congratulate The Daily Sikeston Standard for its patriotic public service in distributing American flags at cost to homeowners as a means of encouraging wider display of the flag on our national holidays.

John Tower, U. S. Senator from Texas:

With newspaper headlines depicting the crucial state of international affairs, every American is aware of the need for showing the world our nation is dedicated to its heritage of freedom. I would hope that every home can fly our flag on national holidays and I congratulate The Daily Sikeston Standard for its Patriotic public service in furthering this aim."

Wallace F. Bennett, U. S. Senator from Utah:

"I have long felt that the flying of the flag on national holidays is the least citizens can do to help remind themselves and others of our heritage and our good fortune to be living in the 'land of the free'... I congratulate The Daily Sikeston Standard for the public service in furthering this aim."

Thomas J. Dodd, U. S. Senator from Connecticut:

"With newspaper hearings depicting the difficult state of international affairs, every American is aware of the need for a united front to show the world our nation is dedicated to its heritage of freedom. I believe every home should fly our flag on national holidays, and I congratulate The Daily Sikeston Standard for its patriotic public service in furthering this aim."

Warren C. Magnuson, U. S. Senator from Washington:

"We cannot have too many American flags flying along our residential avenues on national holidays to remind ourselves as well as the world what it actually means to live in America and share its heritage. I congratulate The Daily Sikeston Standard for taking part in this effort."
